ARMY SERVICE EVASION STIRS AUSTRIA TO ACT

Canadian Pacific Railway Prosecution Said to Be Based Upon Great Decrease of Enrolment at Recruiting Offices

EMIGRATION LARGE

LONDON—The arrest of Herr Altman, representative of the Canadian Pacific railway in Vienna, and the raiding of offices of that company has created a situation so peculiar and fraught with such possibilities that the Monitor representative called today on a gentleman whose information on the subject is absolutely unimpeachable with a view to learning the facts of the case.

The whole difficulty, the Monitor informant declared, originated in the breaking away of the Canadian Pacific Company from the pool in the early part of this year. The company was concerned solely with the development of the Dominion of Canada and wished to have a free hand for this purpose.

The immediate effect of the breakaway was a great lowering of rates by the North German companies who saw that concessions obtained by company to trade direct to Trieste were bound to divert immigrant traffic from the North sea.

A single glance at the map must be sufficient to convince any one of this. Simultaneously the full weight of the vast financial shipping interests of Germany was thrown into the scale against the Canadian Pacific company and political pressure was brought to bear in Vienna.

The immediate result of this was the interference of the war minister, who had become alarmed at the draining of recruits. The result of this alarm was shown a few days ago, when the raid on the Canadian Pacific railway offices was undertaken.

To the war minister the first essential is a supply of recruits, and the interests of the war offices of the continental powers outweigh even those of the treasury.

The treasury had gained considerably by concessions to the Canadian Pacific Company for the reason that the stream of emigrants had been diverted from the German and Prussian state railways feeding Hamburg to the Austrian state railways feeding Trieste.

All this was as nothing to the minister of war. He saw that the lowering of rates had increased the number of emigrants in an extraordinary way, and the whole force of the government was set to work to prevent this.

Altman himself was a citizen of the United States and the great bulk of the emigrant traffic flowed to the United States rather than to Canada; indeed, emigrants carried by the Canadian Pacific railway amounted only to about 5 per cent of the total.

This should have been proof to the Austrian authorities that the real danger lay at north German and Dutch ports, but political influence of German ships in Austria was sufficient to divert attention for the time being to the Canadian Pacific line. Publication of emigrant returns has, however, shown the true facts of the case, and other lines were now coming in for their share of government attention.

It is not believed in London that Altman has in any way infringed on the emigration laws. His instructions to the contrary were precise, and every agent of the company holds his position subject to instant dismissal if he commits any breach of these laws.

It is, therefore, believed in English shipping circles that charges against him personally are purely the result of rivalry between various competing lines and political pressure which German lines have been able to bring to bear in Vienna.

An increase in both attendance and interest is noted in the activities at the new municipal gymnasium at Lexington and Bunker Hill streets, Charlestown, which opened for classes for the first time this fall. Maurice R. Smith is in charge of the gymnasium work, and John Canno, custodian, is in charge of the building. A special increase is noticed in the number of children attending the classes. There were more than 170 recently, which has made it necessary to hold their classes in the large gymnasium on the third floor. Monday and Tuesday mornings there are classes for women, Wednesday and Friday mornings candidates for civil service classes are trained, and Wednesday and Saturday are boys' days. The gymnasium is a three-story building with an auditorium on the first floor, shower-baths and lockers on the second floor and on the third floor is the gymnasium, surrounded by a gallery running track.

DISTURBANCES IN PORTUGAL LAID UPON ROYALISTS

Unimportant Events Exaggerated by Them for Political Purposes, Charges Minister

LONDON—The Monitor representative has the authority of the Portuguese minister for stating that the disturbances reported this morning throughout Portugal represent nothing but another phase of the constant petty intrigues which are persistently being engineered by the Royalist party.

On the present occasion the disturbances were of the most insignificant description and a statement that the police who mutinied were fired upon and wounded is entirely untrue. The whole affair is only another instance of an attempt of the Royalist party to make capital out of a common street disturbance.

BILL RELEASING 1000 FROM CIVIL SERVICE SIGNED

WASHINGTON—The urgent deficiency bill arranging for the abolishment of the commerce court, removal of civil service protection from more than 1000 deputy revenue collectors and provision of funds for the Panama canal and various other federal enterprises, was signed by President Wilson today. He filed this memorandum:

"I am convinced that the offices of deputy collector and deputy marshal were never intended to be included under the ordinary provision of the civil service law. The control of the whole method and spirit of the administration of the proviso in this bill which concerns the appointment of these officers is no less entirely in my hands now than it was before the bill became law; my warm advocacy and support both of the principle and of the bona fide practice of civil service reform is known to the whole country; and there is no danger that the spoils principle will creep in with my approval or connivance."

BOSTON BANKERS SEE PRESIDENT

WASHINGTON—Josiah Quincy and William A. Gaston of Boston called at the White House and state department today. They conferred with Secretary Tamm, apparently on the Massachusetts political situation, but had nothing to say publicly as to their visit. Currency legislation is one reason for their presence.

Representative F. S. Dietrick of Massachusetts called on the President today but did not care to state the purpose of the conference. He said he had been forced to discontinue his series of town meetings in Cambridge when called back to Washington, but will return to Boston this week and resume the town meetings.

GREAT BRITAIN SHIPS TO BE IN CANAL PARADE

American Ambassador Makes Announcement at Navy League Dinner in London at Which Japanese Diplomat Speaks

NELSON IS PRAISED

LONDON—The annual banquet of the Navy League was held last night in London and was attended by the ambassadors of the United States and Japan, both of whom spoke.

Dr. Page, who returned thanks for the guests, declared that every man who spoke the English language felt as Englishmen when it came to Nelson.

Americans' reverence for the Nelson idea would be embodied in an impressive naval program which would mark the opening of the Panama canal.

He was glad to be able to announce that his majesty's government had accepted the invitation of the government of the United States to take part in the great international procession which, by a singularly happy coincidence, would take place in the very year which formed the centenary of peace between English-speaking men. The American admiral who would lead the fleet on that day would be able to say with Nelson that he would have the happiness to command a band of brothers.

The Japanese ambassador, replying to the same toast, declared that Nelson day was regarded with great interest in Japan, for the naval history of Japan had come to resemble very closely that of the United Kingdom. He believed that the Anglo-Japanese alliance had been instrumental in preserving peace in the far east and that it would continue to do this in the future.

The toast of the evening was proposed by Lord Selborne, who took occasion to criticize Winston Churchill's offer to the German government, which has met with so little sympathy in any country.

COMMISSIONER AT KIEFF BELIEVES BEILISS INNOCENT

LONDON—Kieff trial developed a further stage yesterday when the police commissioner, who investigated the occurrence in the first instance, declared that he had come to the conclusion that the affair was the work of robbers and made such a report to the government. He was then told to conduct a further investigation with a view to finding out whether the crime had not been committed by the Jews.

He explained that he did not think this had been the case and that the incriminating letters bore internal evidence of having been written by criminals with the purpose of transferring the suspicion to the Jews.

FRENCH AVIATOR REACHES SENS IN FLIGHT TO EGYPT

LONDON—Daucourt, carrying one passenger and flying a Borel monoplane, left Issy les Moulineaux at 8:20 o'clock yesterday morning in an endeavor to reach Egypt by way of Schaffhausen, Vienna, Budapest, Belgrade, Bucharest, Varna, Constantinople, Eski-Shehr, Konia, Eregh, Adana, Alexandretta, Aleppo, Hama, Beirut, Jaffa, Jerusalem, Gaza, El-Arish, Port Said, Heliopolis, Cairo and Alexandria.

The most difficult sections, it is calculated, will be passage of the iron gates on the Danube, crossing of the Taurus in Syria and flight over the desert between Palestine and Egypt. In this last section no help will be available in the event of any trouble to the monoplane.

WORLD UNION OF STUDENTS IS BUREAU PLAN

George W. Nasmyth Director of Scheme to Bring Movements of College Undergraduates Everywhere Into Close Touch

STUDY TO BE AIDED

Preliminary plans for the establishment of a permanent International Bureau of Students with branches in all countries, as recommended at the eighth international congress of students held at Cornell University last August, are now being made. George W. Nasmyth, who has recently become identified with the World Peace Foundation as a member of the board of directors, was elected director of the international bureau at the congress and Louis P. Lochner, now in Madison, Wisconsin, was elected secretary. The headquarters of the bureau are at 40 Mt. Vernon street.

So far as formulated, the aims of the bureau are to unite student movements and organizations everywhere and to promote among them closer international contact, mutual understanding and friendship, to encourage the study of international relations and problems in the universities and colleges and to encourage a sympathetic understanding of the culture, problems and intellectual currents of other nations, to facilitate foreign study and to increase its value and fruitfulness.

Certain activities have already been undertaken, among them the establishment of an international student magazine to be published in three languages, and cooperation in the arrangements for congresses of students and interchange of students. Arrangements are also being made for the exchange of publications between student organizations and for the publication of a weekly news letter.

One department will distribute information concerning the requirements for admission and degrees, fees, cost of living and special advantages offered by different universities. This department will also urge the appointment by the universities of advisers for foreign students.

The bureau will offer its assistance to students thinking of foreign study, even though they have no connection with the international federation. It will provide a medium through which students of similar subjects in different countries may correspond with each other. This work, it is thought, will soon lead to the formation of other international student organizations based on special interests.

With the international bureau centered in America, it will be of great assistance to American students going abroad to study, and it will bring many more students to this country. Experience has shown that the first effect of the increasing number of foreign students from other countries in American universities will be an improved civilization through the spread of American ideals. Next, trade is expected to be increased with different countries and political relations much improved.

One of the objects of the bureau will be to encourage the formation of clubs for the study of international relations, which may result in creating a demand that the colleges establish courses in this subject.

FEDERAL PENSIONS FOR CONFEDERATE VETERANS URGED

WASHINGTON—Legislation is being urged upon Congress to pension confederate soldiers from the fund of $60,000,000 now in the federal treasury, and which has been held by the supreme court to have been illegally collected as a direct tax on cotton during the civil war. Gen. Bennett H. Young, commander of the United Confederate Veterans, with headquarters at New Orleans, La., is seeking the action, and Senator Randall of Louisiana and Representative Curley of Massachusetts are contemplating introducing the bill.

General Young asserts that while the supreme court ordered that the money be returned to the original payers of the tax on presentation of the certificates, most of these certificates are not now available, hence the fund is still in the treasury. The southern states, he says, are under the burden of pensioning their soldiers, and should be relieved to the extent of this fund.

HUNDREDS OF HOMES READY FOR DUBLIN STRIKERS' CHILDREN

Numerous Offers Received in Support of Plan to Care for Them Temporarily in Scotland, Manchester and London—Archbishop of Dublin Opposes the Plan

LONDON—The Monitor's correspondent in Dublin yesterday had an interview at Liberty hall with Mrs. Dora Montefiore of the Daily Herald League in London. Mrs. Rand of the United States and Miss Grace Neill of the domestic servants organization in London.

The meeting was arranged by Miss Larkin, and Mrs. Montefiore described her plan, which was to take some 50 children to Scotland, another 50 to Manchester and another 50 to London.

Offers had been made by people in all these places to house, feed and clothe the children until their parents are again able to provide for them. Already 300 homes had offered to take in these children and quantities of warm clothing had been brought over to Ireland for their use.

For two hours that morning the committee had been receiving applications from mothers, whilst the respectability of homes offered had been guaranteed

MINISTER LOOKS FOR CONSENT ON HOME RULE BILL

Charles Hobhouse Tells His Constituents at Bristol He Is Optimistic Enough to Expect Such Settlement of Controversy

PEACE A NECESSITY

LONDON—The last member of the ministry to refer to the home rule problem is Charles Hobhouse who, speaking last night to his constituents at Bristol, held out distinct hopes of a settlement by consent.

It was a matter of common knowledge, he said, that the cabinet had been engaged in discussing the question, and in spite of all reports to the contrary, absolute unanimity had pervaded these discussions. He was himself, he declared, optimistic and sanguine enough to believe that there might be such rapprochement between the two parties as might produce the result to which he had alluded.

The decision to which the cabinet had come would, he believed, commend itself to the vast majority of sober-minded electors. What was called the voice of reason had again been heard, and it was assumed that there was no reason why legislation should not be that of accord rather than discord.

Any deflection or modification of the home rule bill of course could only take place in response to some great and permanent advantage.

They must get the promise of peace in Ireland so as to be sure there would be no aftermath of bitterness when the bill was passed.

What the government is really contemplating is being kept a profound secret, which will probably be divulged by Mr. Asquith in his forthcoming speech.

At the same time the most careful inquiries have been made from Irish magistrates as to the effect on peace of any delay in the enactment or the withdrawal of the present bill.

JESSIE WILSON CHAMPIONS CAUSE OF YOUNG WOMEN

President's Daughter Addresses a New York Audience in Behalf of Fund of $3,000,000

NEW YORK—Miss Jessie Wilson, daughter of the President, today addressed an audience of prominent New York women in a plea for aid in a Young Women's Christian Association campaign to raise $3,000,000.

Miss Wilson pleaded for efficient and quick aid throughout the country to young girls, particularly those who are workers. The association will start its money raising campaign throughout the country on Nov. 10.

TRACK-LAYING HASTENING URGED

Mayor Fitzgerald, Gen. William A. Bancroft, president of the Boston Elevated Railroad Company, and Louis K. Rourke, commissioner of public works, conferred today in regard to expediting the work of track-laying in certain streets. The mayor urged Mr. Bancroft to hasten the track-laying work along on Norfolk street and Center street, Jamaica Plain, and at the crossing at Orient Heights.

STOCKHOLDERS OF NEW HAVEN HEAR REPORTS

Differences Arise When Clarence H. Verner of New York Offers Resolution That Minutes of Directors Be Made Clearer

MR. ELLIOTT OBJECTS

President, Mr. Bulkeley and Others Differ Over Procedure on Motion—Mr. Mellen Said to Have Received No Money

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—At the annual meeting of the New Haven railway stockholders here today Clarence H. Verner of New York offered a resolution calling for clearer reports and the elucidation of the company's minutes.

After a debate, Ebenezer J. Hill of Norwalk, Conn., said there were more Connecticut shareholders than New Yorkers and advised Mr. Verner to desist. Mr. Elliott then declared the resolution tabled.

Morgan G. Bulkeley informed the stockholders that he had retained lawyers to institute proceedings before the highest judicial court of Massachusetts to have the public service commission pass on the New Haven's issue of debentures. "It is ridiculous," he said, "for stockholders to be asked to contribute nearly $2,000,000 for the privilege of putting their own money into their own property."

The meeting was held in Harmonie hall. Frequent disputes took place between President Howard Elliott, Mr. Verner and Morgan G. Bulkeley, president of the Aetna Life Insurance Company.

Mr. Verner, in offering his resolution declared that the history of the New Haven company justified the efforts of the stockholders to secure whatever information they could regarding its inner workings.

"There has been too much silence on the part of the shareholders and too much concealment by the directors," he said.

"Can you expect stockholders to approve the acts of directors unless they know fully what those acts were?" Mr. Verner demanded.

"Such a demand of approval would hereafter prevent stockholders from acting should inequalities be discovered later, although I cast no insinuation upon the management."

Mr. Bulkeley, who came into the meeting with proxies for 10,000 shares, questioned President Elliott about the call for the meeting.

"Is there nothing to do but approve the actions of the board?" he demanded. "Cannot we also disapprove?"

The president admitted that they could disapprove. Mr. Verner then demanded a vote on his resolution.

President Elliott refused a viva voce vote.

D. A. Blakeslee tried to get through a resolution killing that of Mr. Verner, but it was rejected by the 350 or more stockholders in attendance.

It was announced that James L. Richards, president of the Boston Consolidated Gas Company, and Galen L. Stone will go on the board of directors to succeed Theodore N. Vail and Alexander Cochrane, resigned.

President Elliott, answering a question, said Charles S. Mellen had received no money from the New Haven since his resignation, though he had done a great deal of work for the company.

Mr. Verner's motion was that the stockholders' meeting be adjourned for three weeks and that the directors and officers be directed to print and mail to the stockholders copies of the minutes of the different meetings. Mr. Verner withdrew his demand for a viva voce vote. Ebenezer J. Hill of Norwalk, Conn., made a speech in which he criticized Mr. Verner and the purpose of his motion.

Mr. Elliott read a resolution adopted by the directors on Oct. 3 showing the provisions made for complying with the recommendations of the interstate commerce commission written by Mr. Prouty and the committees appointed to investigate and report on all the properties in the New Haven system.

These committees went to work at

Socialist Party in Holland Said to Have Lost Prestige

CHANGES IN PARTIES

(Special to the Monitor)
THE HAGUE, Holland.—For centuries there had been in Holland a struggle between two parties, the one dominated by the somewhat narrow views of the church, and the other holding wider views. In the church party there always remained the old gap between the Roman Catholic church and the National church. These only combined very occasionally.

The progress of democracy by degrees brought about a change in the parties, the one becoming more conservative, the other more progressive, the church party uniting with the former. As time went on, however, these parties changed, becoming more united, and holding more conservative views, until in 1909 a coalition was formed. It was this coalition, lasting from 1909 to 1913, which held the majority in Parliament, thus making the ministry, according to tradition, wholly conservative, and it was this same coalition which condemned the great plan for enclosing and draining the Zuider Zee, as too expensive and too speculative, supporting a scheme for a much less thorough and comprehensive system of drainage.

This unnatural union of the parties could not last, however, and when a new tariff bill, breaking wholly with the principles of free trade, was introduced, the very conservative members themselves revolted, with the result that a new political combination was formed. This party, holding more liberal views, now constitutes the majority in the second chamber, as a result of the election in June of the present year.

The clerical party finding themselves in the minority, endeavored to upset the Liberal party by voting always for the Socialist, in every case where the only other candidate was a Liberal. This plan nearly succeeded, since the number of Socialists elected was 18 as against six at the previous election, and this constituted about one third of the majority.

As there are nine ministerial departments, the crown, faithful to tradition, offered three ministerial seats to the Socialists, but they apparently were not prepared for this, and after some hesitation and difference of opinion between their leaders, they refused, but promised to assist the Liberal cabinet, when formed, in carrying out its program.

The Liberal party, having only 30 elected members, thought its position too weak for the constitution of an exclusively Liberal cabinet, as the Socialist copartnership seemed too uncertain, and they also refused, leaving the crown without a ministry.

At this juncture there were two alternatives, to leave the cabinet constituted as before the election, or to form a nonpolitical cabinet. However, the crown broke away from tradition on three points: First, by electing the new ministers on its own initiative; second, by electing only those who could be relied on to subscribe to the program of the majority, and third, by not consulting the leaders of the minority. The crown thus abandoned its neutral ground and sided to some extent with the majority.

From the Queen's speech it is evident that the cabinet, though not bound to any particular political program, will speedily undertake the great plan for enclosing and draining the Zuider Zee. The position of the cabinet is still, however, a precarious one. It is to a great extent dependent on the Socialists, and the majority in the first chamber, which has a right to veto without amendment, is clerical.

Also, the Queen's speech contained some very decided political propositions such as an important extension of suffrage, increase of inheritance duty, a first-class battleship for the Indian colonies, and so on. On the other hand, the Socialists, by refusing the ministerial seats, appear to have lost much in popularity, and this, added to internal disagreements, will considerably weaken their party.

MELBOURNE HEARS
SINGLE TAX URGED
IN TOWN PLANNING

(Special to the Monitor)
MELBOURNE, Vic., Aus.—W. B. Griffin, the Chicago architect, who is at present on a visit to Australia to confer with the departmental authorities in connection with the construction of the federal capital city, is a follower of Henry George.

During his stay in Melbourne he was present at a meeting of single taxers from whom he had a very cordial reception. In response to their welcome, Mr. Griffin said that every reform movement in the United States might be said to have a single taxer at the back of it, even if he were only in disguise. He himself, regarded the movement as one of the most elevating influences in human life, springing as it did from a desire to benefit democracy.

The first principle in town planning, Mr. Griffin thinks, is single taxation, and he considers that where the system has been applied in that connection, most satisfactory results have been obtained. He had heard Herbert Bigelow, who was a leader of the movement in the United States, on the same platform with the American orator, William Jennings Bryan, with whom he thought, Mr. Bigelow could stand comparison.

The movement, Mr. Griffin said, was growing in America, where its greatest enemy was indifference, although there were now several straight-out single taxers in Congress.

MUNICH MUSEUM
RECEIVES GIFT OF
MODEL OF CANAL

(Special to the Monitor)
MUNICH, Bavaria.—The select committee of the Museum for Masterpieces of the Natural Sciences and Technique held a meeting recently, in the great hall of the Academy of Sciences, which was attended by a large number of prominent representatives of natural science and technique from all parts of the German empire.

The protector of the museum, Prince Regent Ludwig of Bavaria, was the honorary president. In his speech he said that before he became the regent he had assisted in the foundation of the museum, and had been very much interested in and pleased with its growth, and that now when his powers were so much greater he would do all he could, as regent of Bavaria, to further its development.

As a proof of this sincere promise he presented to the museum a beautiful model of the Danube-Main canal, and said it was, in his opinion, necessary to develop the waterways of Bavaria and connect that country with the great shipping routes of the world, pointing out especially the importance of first joining Bavaria to the North sea. Dr. Krupp von Bohlen-Halbach, the owner of the Krupp works, is a member of the committee.

GREAT ADVANCE
MADE IN VALUE
OF OSMIRIDIUM

(Special to the Monitor)

HOBART, Tasmania.—In a report upon the osmiridium field between the Savage river and Bald hill, on the west coast, the state mining engineer (W. H. Conder) states that gold washing in the Savage river and its tributaries, was carried on as far back as 30 years ago, and the diggers used at that time to consider the osmiridium which remained behind with their gold a nuisance, for, owing to the slight difference in weight between the two, the latter could only be separated by amalgamation.

Osmiridium was not then in demand, but about 15 years ago prices went up from 30s. to 50s. per ounce, and parties began washing the Savage river sands in summer time for osmiridium. The present price offered on the field is £10 5s. an ounce, and at this figure a very small daily quota of mineral makes ground payable.

It has always been recognized by those competent to form an opinion that the Hazlewood serpentine must be the parent of the alluvial osmiridium in the Savage basin, but it remained for T. H. Jones, in August last year, to definitely locate the western edge of the serpentine mass as the source of the metal.

The value of the output of minerals in Tasmania for the year 1912 was £1,493,502. Tin headed the list with £543,103, copper and copper ore coming next with £440,444. The value of osmiridium mined was £5742.

GERMAN PANAMA
EXHIBIT IS URGED
BY AMBASSADOR

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany.—The new American ambassador to Berlin, J. W. Gerard, was interviewed by several newspaper representatives on his arrival to take up his post in the German capital.

He stated that nothing but his appointment as representative of the United States at the court of the German Emperor could console him for leaving New York. He had repeatedly been told, and he fully concurred with the view, that the post of ambassador to Berlin was among the most honorable which the government possessed to bestow.

As to the Panama exhibition, Mr. Gerard said that the opening of the Panama canal would produce a most far reaching revolution in the commerce of the world, and he hoped that Germany would by some means take her place among the San Francisco exhibitors.

Such an opportunity as was afforded by the exhibition to German merchants, of increasing their custom in South America, they could hardly afford to lose.

LISBON, Portugal.—Oct. 5 being the third anniversary of the proclamation of the Portuguese republic, guns were fired and the city illuminated in honor of the occasion. The number still in the prisons is 44.

BRITISH LABOR
LEADER AGAINST ELECTION NOW

Ramsay Macdonald Says That Pledges to Constituents Have Not Yet Been Filled

(Special to the Monitor)

LEICESTER, England.—Speaking at Leicester recently Ramsay Macdonald, M. P., leader of the Labor party, declared that they must ceaselessly advocate their opinions in the constituencies; for if they were to succeed in Parliament they must be supported by public feeling.

Party machinery, he said, was good, but behind the machinery they must have a people converted to socialism if a Socialist government was to come in. He had been against a general election, not because he had any fear as to what would happen to him in Leicester, but because in Parliament they had not yet fulfilled their pledges to their constituents, and until they had done that, they had no right to trouble them with another election.

In addition to this, owing to the Osborne judgment, the Labor party were not yet in a position to run a full team of candidates with reasonable hope of success. Until the Parliament act had matured they were not in a position to do their best for labor.

Proceeding, Mr. Macdonald said that it had been urged that they needed enthusiasm and to go straight ahead convinced that they were right. He would be the last to impair enthusiasm, but they wanted more than that. They had to take care lest they dashed their feet against a stone with disaster to their party, and to assure themselves that the steps they took brought them nearer and nearer home.

LONDON'S LORD
MAYOR TALKS TO
GERMAN OFFICERS

(Special to the Monitor)

LONDON.—The lord mayor, Sir David Burnett, was the chief guest lately at the annual dinner of the German Officers Club in London held at the Imperial restaurant, Regent street. In responding to the toast of "The Lord Mayor," he said that one should bear in mind that whilst wars in centuries past were made by individuals, they were more frequently made now by the people, by prejudice and by ignorance.

Of course, the peoples of all countries were largely directed, influenced and educated by the press, and upon the press rested a serious responsibility, the greatest that could fall upon any person or class. But there was also a responsibility upon the people of the two countries.

There might be between the two countries causes of friction, but, after all, the rivalry between the two was for the good of the world. It was a competition which neither country feared more than the other, and it was not the cause of serious misunderstanding. Therefore it was the duty of every citizen on every occasion to let the truth be known that there was not any serious ill-feeling between the two countries.

SOUTH AFRICAN
COMPANY PLANS FOR RHODESIA

(Special to the Monitor)

CAPE TOWN, S. A.—How Rhodesia is to be most rapidly developed, cultivated, and its population increased, is engaging the attention of the British South African Company at present, and before many weeks the result of their deliberations will be made known.

In thus bringing the question before the people by the publication of a plan, the company feel that they are following out the fundamental scheme which was aimed towards holding the people of Rhodesia in close touch with the chartered company on the land settlement question, and the establishment of an organization to carry out that purpose.

The British South African Company will await the arrival of Sir Starr Jameson, president of the company, and Wilson Fox, before taking further steps. In the meantime Mr. Malcolm, one of the directors, has been talking the question over with many people in Rhodesia, who appear to be very favorably impressed with the elaborate land settlement proposals.

LEADING BERLIN
MUSICIANS JOIN
IN ORGANIZATION

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN, Germany.—Leading Berlin musicians who have long been agitating the formation of an "association of professional musicians," saw their first wish realized when, with Professor Xaver Scharwenka in the chair, the association was at last, after long discussion, formally called into being.

One of the main functions of the new society will be to deal with questions relating to the powerful concert agencies of Berlin, which constitute a capitalistic wall of authority against which any protest of the musicians for a change of conditions may break in vain.

The action of the musicians in uniting into a properly constituted body will go far to mitigate this undesirable state of affairs. Musicians elected to the executive committee include: Prof. George Schumann, the well known conductor of the Singakademie; Professor Xaver Scharwenka; Mayer-Mahr; the American baritone, Arthur van Eweyk; Lilli Lehmann; Frau Dr. Christian; Mark Gunsbourg, and, as attorney for the association, Dr. Osterrieth.

BERLIN UNIVERSITY TO EXCLUDE ONLY
RUSSIAN STUDENTS

(Special to the Monitor)

BERLIN.—Berlin University has settled the vexed question of the admission of students from other countries to its courses by deciding that only Russian students shall be prohibited, for the present, at any rate, from further enrollment at the University of Berlin.

Instructions have been duly issued that, for the winter term 1913-1914 no further Russian students shall be matriculated. This restriction, as already stated, will not affect those students already enrolled.

Students of other nationalities are in no way affected by this prohibitive regulation, and upon duly satisfying the usual condition will be admitted as freely as hitherto.

Austria-Hungary Statesmen Plan
Concession to Serbs, Who May Get Control of Oriental Railway in That Country

TREATIES PROPOSED

(Special to the Monitor)

VIENNA, Austria.—The most important question under consideration in Vienna at the moment of writing is that of Austro-Serbian relations. For a number of years Austria-Hungary has refused to consider any real rapprochement with Serbia. The Austrian, and more especially the Hungarian, has a deep rooted dislike of the Slav. This is concealed, more or less, but the fact always remains and affects the policy of the country very considerably.

It is fair to say that the Emperor himself has no such prejudices, and that were it not for the terrible events which preceded King Peter's accession to the throne, there is no doubt that he would have received him with the same graciousness which he accorded to the King of Montenegro.

Quite recently a sudden volte-face has occurred in Austrian politics. The why and wherefore are difficult to determine. One thing is, however, certain: the Austro-Hungarian statesman has decided to conciliate the Serb and the southern Slav. Commercial treaties are to be concluded. It is most probable that the concessions made to Serbia will take the form of the cession of the Oriental railway to that country. She is anxious to count it as a state railway, and Austria-Hungary as the chief shareholder is willing to waive her interests in the concern in return for the good will of the Serbs.

It is believed in the best informed political circles that there is but small chance of Serbian meat being admitted into Austria on a really fair footing, and that this means of coming to terms with the Serbs cannot be reckoned with, as the Agrarians always stand firm against anything of the kind.

The reason of this sudden change is attributed to a variety of causes. The negotiations between Italy and Austria-Hungary on the possible occupation of Albania appear not to have gone very smoothly. Beyond this there is a very urgent need for peace. Both Austria-Hungary and Serbia need money. It would be difficult to say which country stands in greater need of financial assistance on a large scale, or which is more desirous of floating loans. Both are aware that no loans can be floated so long as Europe expects another war in the Balkans.

It is thus very likely that Austria-Hungary and Serbia regard the present rapprochement as merely a business union.

derstanding, based on a mutual need for money. They both desire to float loans, and Paris is the only market open to transactions of that kind at present. Paris has stood for peace throughout the Balkan crisis, having money to lose in the south. Thus the agreement to which they have come is likely to be lasting as it is based on questions of mutual interest and not on sentimental grounds. Some Austrians say that their country is at last adopting a sensible policy and making friends with the greatest power in the Balkans merely "to march with success."

This is, however, somewhat exaggerated, for it is probably only the urgent need of the money necessary for the construction of additional battle-ships that is compelling Austria to stand for peace in the Balkans, this being the only means whereby she can obtain the money required.

Edinburgh Trade Increases Close of Ulster Campaign

NEW AMERICAN TARIFFS RAISE SCOTLAND SALES

Linen and Wool Goods Manufacturers at Edinburgh Report Larger Shipments Since the Measure Went into Operation

OTHER TRADE IS SEEN

(Special to the Monitor)
EDINBURGH, Scotland—In the Fife-shire linen trade, shipments of goods to the United States are being made in larger quantities since the new duties have been fixed. A good all-round business is anticipated with America, buyers are being carefully nursed, while personal visits are seen to be part of a manufacturer's program at present.

In flax, of the new crop, there has been more business passing, and prospects are most satisfactory. As a result of the reduced duty on wool and woolen goods, nearly all the spinners are keeping all their machinery going, and dyers have the prospect of excellent business. The demand for hosiery and knitted woolen fabrics is well maintained, employment in the numerous factories being most satisfactory.

British manufacturers of agricultural implements may benefit to some extent by the new tariff—for people who have gone from this country to America, engaged in agricultural pursuits, could, if they wished, procure for themselves British made goods at a reasonable price, an indulgence hitherto impossible owing to the high tariff.

Owing to the world-wide shortage of cattle, which the changed tariff does not affect, it is anticipated that the new tariff will make leather somewhat dearer in this country. Hitherto Britain has practically been the world's market for hides, but now America may take a bigger share of the supply. It is thought, however, that tanners in this country will benefit by the change.

Biscuit manufacturers in Edinburgh are confident that the tariff revision is the forerunner of considerable increase in trade. Formerly manufacturers in this country did a large export business with the United States, but the high tariff reduced this practically to nothing. One large biscuit manufacturer is already in communication with a firm in America with whom he formerly did business amounting yearly to several thousand pounds. British-made biscuits are considered to be far superior to biscuits made in any other part of the world.

The rubber industry in Edinburgh gives work to a vast number of people. In spite, even, of the old tariff, rubber goods made in Edinburgh maintained their market in the United States, but with a reduction of least 20 per cent, great extension of trade is certain. "Owing to the tariff, motor tires manufactured on this side have been debased from competing with the American product, but it is anticipated that efforts to find buyers in the states will now meet with success, and a new outlet be thus obtained. Already the orders from American houses, which awaited the passing of the bill, are increasing the business of Edinburgh trade."

The bookprinting industry, which forms one of the chief occupations in Edinburgh, is naturally filled with speculation as to the probable effect on the trade of the revised American tariff. The head of one large firm expressed the view that it will undoubtedly have a great and beneficial effect, not only on the printing trade of Edinburgh, but of the country in general.

W. B. Blaikie, LL. D., said he did not look for any great increase in the export of books to America, but there could be no doubt that the reduction of 10 per cent would make a slight difference to publishers of noncopyright books. Books possessing the United States copyright required to be set up in the United States. The revised tariff might also result in some small increase in the production of books that would have in America a sale insufficient to make it worth the author's or publisher's while to obtain an American copyright, by printing it in that country.

The head of another leading firm, however, is of opinion that the change must necessarily result in an extensive new field being opened up for the cheaper form of books. At present the export from this country is comparatively small. Papers makers in the Edinburgh district agree that the reduction in the paper duty means little or nothing to them. Beyond a slight quantity of esparto paper—which is only sent because its manufacture in America is not satisfactory, no paper is sent from this district to the United States at all, although trade with Canada has developed within recent years. In any case the reductions made are such as to really only affect paper required for newspaper work.

One important Edinburgh firm with a house in New York, has, however, found it convenient, even under the old tariff, to buy its paper in this country and send it out to America, and with the new conditions it will, of course, be even more profitable for British manufacturers to export to America. Printing ink is also among the articles upon which reduction of duty has been made, but it is the opinion of a representative of a leading Scottish firm, who for five or six years had a branch in New York, that it is not possible to compete profitably in ink with the Americans, under any tariff whatever.

CALCUTTA MUHAMMADANS DEMAND 12 SEATS IN COUNCIL

Indian Association Protests to Government Against Proposal That Certain Chairs in Municipal Bodies Shall Be Ear-Marked for Members of Religious Sect

(Special to the Monitor)
CALCUTTA, India—The Muhammadans of Calcutta have recently put forward a demand which would have been considered grotesque and impossible in any other country but India. It is that, of the 60 or 70 seats in the municipal corporation of Calcutta, 12 shall be set apart for Muhammadans only.

This demand illustrates the extraordinary conditions under which problems of self-government have to be thrashed out in a country like India, where the people are divided by profound differences.

In order to minimize the effect of these differences in the ordinary political life of the country, and especially in order to prevent the Muhammadans from being swamped by the Hindus, who form an enormous majority of the population, the government of India some years ago introduced the same principle of communal representation which the Muhammadans of Calcutta now wish to extend to municipal affairs.

That is to say, in every provincial legislative council, as also in the imperial legislative council itself, a certain number of seats are set apart specially for the Muhammadan community. For these seats no Hindu is eligible, and at the same time no seats are specially reserved for Hindus.

This distinction was protested against by the Hindus at the time, and it was argued that its effect would be to accentuate existing differences between the two communities. The distinction was nevertheless persisted in, as it has been for many years the policy of the government to show special favor to the Muhammadans wherever such feeling can be exhibited without intolerable injustice.

The result of this policy has been to encourage the Muhammadans to press for concessions in other matters besides representation in the legislative bodies, and the memorial which has just been addressed to the government of Bengal by the Moslem Trades Association is an illustration of this tendency.

The proposal that certain seats in the municipal bodies should be ear-marked for Muhammadans has once more aroused the opposition of the Hindus, and at least one representative body, the Indian Association, has already addressed a protest to the government in the matter. The general opinion appears to be that the special consideration shown to Muhammadans by the government has not, so far, led to the most satisfactory results.

M. Poincaré's gift consists of a magnificent sword, the exact reproduction of a weapon in the royal armory, dating from the period of Philip II. The pommel is encrusted with precious stones and the blade is wrought in one piece.

PARIS—M. Paul Doumer, senator, and MM. Long and Landry, deputies, have visited Casablanca for the purpose of inspecting the work of development of the town. The advance made in the harbor works and the custom house was especially noted by the visitors, the extent of the quays having almost doubled during the last six months.

The insufficient housing of the primary schools, however, was criticized and a promise was made to the local authorities to bring the matter to the notice of Parliament.

NO SURRENDER CALLED ULSTER'S DOMINANT NOTE

Sir Edward Carson at Armagh Tells His Hearers to Continue Work and Pay No Attention to Gossip of Conferences

CAMPAIGN IS CLOSED

(Special to the Monitor)
ARMAGH, Ireland—As already reported in the Monitor cable despatches, Sir Edward Carson brought his Ulster campaign to a close by addressing a large meeting at Armagh. The county of Armagh has always been noted for the strength of its adherence to Unionist principles, but in the city of Armagh itself the Nationalists have a majority on the council. As a consequence of this, there was an absence of those civic amenities which have been so characteristic in other places of Sir Edward Carson's tour.

The meeting took place at Deanshill, which is about a mile from the center of the city, and, as at every other place visited by the Irish Unionist leader, the meeting was preceded by a parade of the Ulster volunteer force. In this instance 4000 members of the force paraded, and the review was carried out in full military order.

Sir John Lonsdale, M. P., presided, and amongst those present on the platform was the primate of all Ireland, whom Sir Edward Carson subsequently alluded to as "an old college friend and a very good specimen of a brother rebel."

Sir Edward Carson after expressing his pleasure at seeing such a splendid turnout of determined and resolute men, said that the dominant note sounded throughout the inspection, was the old cry of "No surrender!" "The other evening," he went on, "I was passing through the ranks at Dungannon, and a man who has devoted a great deal of time to the organization of the volunteers said to me, 'Our women folks are asking us to get done with it once and for all, and there is not a man amongst us that minds losing his life, but we want to finish the business.'"

Lord Loreburn, he said, had reminded the government that their bill must lead to civil commotion if not to civil war, and they were still waiting the government's criticism upon Lord Loreburn's letter. For his part he could say that, in the circumstances, he looked with grave suspicion on all conferences, because he generally found that in the end "your views were misrepresented and even your entering into a conference was looked upon as a sign of weakness."

"I would advise you," Sir Edward continued, "to take very little notice, unless you see it authoritatively stated, of any of the gossip that is going round about approaches to a conference. I advise you instead to go on with your work. Let others work out, if it be possible, those political aspects, which may in the end save us from the gravest condition which in the lives of any of us ever threatened our own country, the United Kingdom, and the empire."

In conclusion Sir Edward Carson said that the Unionists of Ireland had vast resources, all classes being permeated with a common enthusiasm. They had moreover, behind them the population of England, and a majority of that of Scotland, as well as the pledge of Bonar Law.

F. E. Smith, who also spoke, declared

BRITISH DOCKMEN VETO SYNDICALIST STRIKE METHODS

(Special to the Monitor)
LONDON—Under the trade union act of 1913, a ballot has just been taken of the members of the National Union of Dock Laborers. The actual figures are not yet made public, but the result, it is stated, shows a majority of about 10 to one in favor of political action.

This is a defeat for those who advocate the syndicalist method of the strike in all emergencies. The disapproval expressed by some members to the use of the union's funds in support of parliamentary action has also been overridden by the result of the ballot, and the union will continue to financially support the Labor party to the extent of 4d. per member per annum.

As an immediate outcome of the dockers' vote in favor of political action, Mr. Sexton's Labor candidature for St. Helen's will receive the full support of the dockers' union.

The principal items were cotton velvets, fustians, and so forth, £47,351 9s. 7d.; cotton piece goods, £38,088 18s. 4d.; cotton yarn and thread, £25,947 13s. 5d.; linens, £20,797 14s. 10d.; rag and paper stock, £16,902 6s. 11d.; leather, £10,414 9s. 10d., and handkerchiefs, £8,509 11s.

Chairman Prouty Proposes to Vice-President Rate Increase on Goods Transported Distance of 41 Miles or More

SHIPPERS PROTEST

When Benjamin Campbell, vice-president of the Boston & Maine railroad, appeared as the first witness this afternoon in the hearing on his road's petition for an advance in rates, Charles A. Prouty of the interstate commerce commission proposed that the rate should be increased on all distances over 41 miles one cent a mile. This proposal was made after Mr. Campbell explained that 14 per cent of the freight revenue moved under class rates and that the first four classes bring the greatest amount of revenue.

D. O. Ives, transportation expert of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, was then called upon by Mr. Prouty and he introduced his witnesses.

William F. Garcelon of the freight protective committee of the Arkwright Club said that the prosperity of the manufacturing centers was affected many miles in the country by the proposed increase. Thomas Leavitt also testified.

A. C. Manson of the Boston Wholesale Grocers Association said that shippers on all points of the system protested vigorously against the proposed rates. He said that merchandise was being automatically advanced into a higher class and this alone would bring a larger percentage to the road.

Howard Elliott, president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, and Morris McDonald, president of the Boston & Maine, are to appear before Mr. Prouty at tomorrow's session.

That decision was reached at the early conference held between Mr. Prouty and the public service commissioners. Further than that fact Mr. Prouty declined to say what had been done at the meeting.

Mr. Prouty expects to leave for home tomorrow night.

Objections to the schedules of rates submitted by the railroad were made by David O. Ives, transportation expert of the Boston Chamber of Commerce, and Frederick J. Macleod, chairman of the public service commission of this state at the session Tuesday. Mr. Ives stated that shippers and business men and the chamber through its committee on transportation oppose the method of constructing the schedules on a "single mileage" basis and maintain that density of traffic, grades, trainload and fuel cost should be taken into consideration.

Commissioner Prouty stated finally that he did not think the so-called "single mileage scale," on which the proposed tariff is based, should be applied to all New England.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR TO FORM HOME CLUB

WASHINGTON—The men and women of the interior department are to have a club of their own. It is to be called the Home Club, because the department was originally designated as the home department. It is to be a purely social organization, composed exclusively of members of the interior department and their families.

It is proposed to secure a building with spacious quarters, reading rooms, and all the accessories of a modern club, and which will have a hall sufficiently large either for dancing, moving pictures or other entertainments of such character as the members may desire. Application blanks are now being circulated among the employees of the department, and Secretary Lane proposes in a few days to call a meeting of those making application for membership, at which an organization will be effected and officers elected.

MR. ROOSEVELT IS WELCOMED BY RIO JANEIRO AND BRAZIL

RIO JANEIRO, Brazil—Theodore Roosevelt is guest of the President of the republic of Brazil, Marshal Hermes Fonseca, today, at breakfast. Later he is to speak before the military college and the Y. M. C. A. Tonight he is to attend the Municipal theater.

Mr. Roosevelt landed from the steamer Vandeyck early on Tuesday and was received on quay of the naval arsenal by a special representative of the President. Cabinet ministers of Brazil, the minister of Argentina, with the members of his legation, the presidents of the Senate and Chamber of Deputies, a representative parliamentary committee, the chief commissioner of police, the presidents of the various tribunals of the high court of justice, the members of the municipal council, headed by the mayor of Rio Janeiro, many members of the diplomatic corps, high functionaries of the government, military and naval officers and other notables attended in full uniform.

A procession headed by Colonel Roosevelt and the representative of the President of the republic proceeded to a reception room in the naval arsenal, which was decorated with Brazilian flags and the stars and stripes intertwined. Colonel Roosevelt paid his respects to the President in a lengthy visit. He then called on Dr. Laur...

Delegates From Eighteen State Organizations Form Union for Promoting Progress in Agricultural Sections of Massachusetts

OFFICERS ARE CHOSEN

AMHERST, Mass.—The Massachusetts Federation for Rural Progress was organized at the Massachusetts Agricultural College Tuesday by delegates from 18 state organizations. President K. L. Butterfield of the college explained why the time has come for the federation of the 33 organizations in Massachusetts promoting agriculture and rural life.

S. R. Parker spoke of the remarkable work accomplished in Hardwick by a community federation. Other speakers were W. C. Jewett for the grange, Dr. David Snedden of the board of education, Mrs. H. H. Lund of the Forward to the Land League, W. E. Waterbury of the Federation of Churches, John A. Scheurle of the Hampden County Improvement League, E. L. Morgan and W. D. Hurd of the college.

A constitution was adopted to promote the cooperation and federation of the various organizations working the state for rural progress. These officers were elected: Kenyon L. Butterfield, president; Dr. David Snedden, vice-president; E. L. Morgan of the college, secretary-treasurer.

The officers were instructed to secure the appointment of a commission on farm improvement, one on marketing and exchange and one on community life.

EVANSTON HAS FREE MUSIC LIBRARY

Public Reading Rooms Contain Section Where Piano and Pianola May Be Used and Compositions Taken Home

TREAT TO THE PEOPLE

THOUGH the day has not come that Edward Bellamy tells about in "Looking Backward" when every house shall be supplied with an improved telephone service which will make it possible for the family to sit comfortably at home and listen to concerts going on in other parts of the city, nevertheless the day has come in one community at least when music may be heard for the asking. That place is Evanston, Ill., where a music room in the public library is giving the people opportunity to play, to hear and to take home for family enjoyment the music they desire. For those patrons who know how to play there is a piano; for others there is a pianola, and for all there are books, printed music and rolls that may be used in the room itself or carried off for two weeks in some cases, one week in others, to be used where and when the borrower chooses.

All this was an experiment five years ago, but it has proved its value so thoroughly that it would seem now as if it had come to stay. The people who were dubious about its success have been silenced long ago, and the room is so popular that those who wish to get in during the afternoon hours have to make a definite appointment in advance. Anyone who owns a library card may make such an appointment, but there are so many who wish to use the piano and pianola that the time of each individual has to be limited to 20 minutes.

The music room was founded in memory of Sadie Knowlton Coe and designed to perpetuate the work of musical culture which she carried on in Evanston for 12 years. The basis of the collection is the printed music and books on music which complete library or significant works for the pianoforte, besides chamber music and opera scores. Large additions have been made, and in harmony with Mrs. Coe's efforts to promote popular appreciation of music, the guiding principle in the selection of this material has been a desire to furnish opportunity for music study to persons at as many stages of musical culture as possible, but most of all to persons whose aims are those of general rather than professional culture. What is merely pleasing or popular, however, possessing neither historical significance nor artistic value, has been excluded.

Though designed primarily as a music work room, the place is also artistically attractive. Life-size busts of Beethoven and Wagner give it the atmosphere of a musical studio, and a piano lamp, table lamp and desk set in beaten copper make the room a pleasant place in which to work. Facilities are supplied for copying music, and the books on music taken in connection with the works on music in the general library are sufficient for all ordinary music study, not only by the people at large but by music students and teachers.

Thursday he will visit the Oswaldo Cruse Institute of Pathology and Bacteriology, and will be the guest of honor at a reception by the American ambassador and the American colony.

Friday the party will drive to Tijuca, on the outskirts of the city. This drive has been arranged by a committee of the Senate and the Chamber, and breakfast will be served under the same auspices. Dr. Lauro Muller's garden party will be held the same afternoon at the Botanical garden, and in the evening Colonel Roosevelt will deliver an address before the Historical Society.

Saturday will be given over to sight-seeing around the bay and a visit to the naval school. Sunday, Colonel Roosevelt will motor to Petropolis, the German colony, about 20 miles from Rio, and the same day will leave for Sao Paulo.

GOLF LINKS OF 57 ACRES PROPOSED FOR ROCKPORT

ROCKPORT, Mass.—George W. Harvey and Harry Dutton of Boston and other summer residents of the South End, Rockport, have obtained options on 57 acres of land for a golf links.

Rockport has had no facilities of this kind and this fact has been felt to be somewhat of a handicap in developing this section as a summer resort. The land in this locality is valuable for farming, there being comparatively a small tillage acreage in the cape.

Options have been secured on the farmsteads of the Andrew Lane estate and the George E. Smith, A. Clifford Smith and Frank Smith places, which with the land previously acquired for the purpose makes a total of 57 acres. If the deal is consummated it is planned to erect a clubhouse on an eminence commanding a view of the course and the shore.

Cape Ann has already three links, the 18-hole course at Bass Rocks, the nine-hole course at Eastern Point, where plans are under way to extend it to 18 holes, and the nine-hole course at the Kettle Cove links at Magnolia.

PROGRESSIVES WIN BALLOT POINT

ANNAPOLIS, Md.—A writ of mandamus, compelling election officials to print the names of Progressive state candidates on all ballots in the state, was granted by Judge Brashears in the circuit court, here Tuesday. An appeal from the decision probably will come before the court of appeals. Among the candidates involved is George L. Wellington, for United States senator.

Judge Brashears held that the time limit clause was directory rather than mandatory, and should be liberally interpreted.

WALLS SOUND-PROOF

Of course it is understood that the piano is not to be used for practice or amusement. Instead, many of the people come to play over some of the music they have heard at concerts and operas or that they expect to hear soon, or that they may never have the opportunity to hear in any other way. If the music is too difficult for them to try over on the piano, they still have the pianola to help them out. And though the room is on the second floor library patrons down below are not disturbed by the music, for the walls of the music room are sound-proof.

According to the last library report there are now in the music room 1441 books, 388 pieces of sheet music, 537 pianola rolls and five current musical periodicals. Provision for new purchases each year has been made possible by an endowment from Prof. George A. Coe, the founder. But of more moment than the mere number of books and rolls in the collection is the fact vouched for by the librarian that the persons who use the room show a grow appreciation of the better class of music, and in due time develop a desire to own such music for themselves.

Reference use of books and music may be made at the usual library hours, but the pianola hours, as they are termed, are 12 to 1:30 and 4 to 6 daily except Sunday, and 7 to 9 Tuesday and Thursday evenings. A special attendant explains the collection and the use of the pianola.

SCHOONER MOTOR BOUND FOR SOUTH FOR RED SNAPPERS

Bound for the tropical fishing grounds, the Boston schooner Motor, Capt. Herbert Pendleton, sailed from Commercial wharf this morning. Manned by a crew of 10 Boston fishermen, the Motor will cruise about the Campeche banks and the Gulf of Mexico after red snappers, a fish found in southern waters.

On the way south the Motor will call at New York to take on a fisherman who is familiar with the red snapper industry and who will instruct the Boston crew. If this enterprise is successful, Captain Pendleton intends to send for his wife and family and remain in southern waters.

During the summer the Motor has been engaged in swordfishing and mackerel seining. The vessel is owned by the captain.

MRS. PANKHURST DELIVERS FIRST FORMAL LECTURE

Suffragist Advocate Speaks for Cause in Madison Square and Praises President Wilson and Methods of American Women

PLANS FOR MEETING

NEW YORK—Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, in Madison Square Garden on Tuesday night, told of political conditions in England from her viewpoint. It was her first formal address in the United States.

Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont, Miss Lavinia Dock, Miss Sybil Wilbur, Miss Alberta Hill, Miss Fola La Follette, Miss Ida Craft and other American suffragists sat on the stage with Mrs. Pankhurst.

Mrs. Pankhurst was introduced by Charles Edward Russell, Socialist candidate for mayor. Her auditors were mainly women. She did not condemn governmental interference with her landing last Saturday. Instead, she had only words of praise for the treatment she had received at Ellis island, of the officials and employees there, and of the excellent management of the island in general. She had high praise for President Wilson, for the firm but gentle way American women have got and are getting the vote, and therefore the lack of any need for militancy in America.

Preparations had been made for an overflow meeting at the Garden, but the big hall, with a seating capacity of 12,000 persons, was scarcely one quarter filled.

2000 MILES OF TOUR COVERED BY PROGRESSIVE

Charles S. Bird Makes 350 Speeches in 20 Days, According to Campaign Announcements—Eighteen More Today

MR. GARDNER ACTIVE

More than 2000 miles have been covered to date by Charles S. Bird, the Progressive candidate for Governor, in his state-wide campaign tour. He has made about 350 speeches in 20 days, according to an announcement today from his campaign headquarters. He left Lowell this forenoon with a schedule of 18 speeches at as many different places today and tonight.

Mr. Bird has made public in answer to criticisms by his Republican opponent, Congressman A. P. Gardner, two letters from J. T. Carey of Albany, president-secretary of the International Brotherhood of Paper Makers, in which it is said that the union has not organized in Mr. Bird's paper mills because conditions there "are and have been far in advance of similar conditions in other mills throughout the country."

Speaking at Lowell last night, Mr. Bird said that he considers the four particular needs of Massachusetts are: A more businesslike and humane government, industrial peace, conservation of natural resources. He declared himself averse to discussing distinctly national issues like the currency question, tariff, etc., which, he said, cannot concern the Governor of Massachusetts.

Former United States Senator Albert J. Beveridge was the leading speaker at Progressive rallies last night in Holyoke and Northampton.

Four Gardner Rallies

Congressman Gardner plans to enliven his campaign with four instead of two rallies tonight, all to be delivered before gatherings of Fall River mill workers in four halls. He has scheduled also an outdoor rally in Middleboro town square during the noon hour.

Replying to a letter from former Senator William E. Chandler of Concord, N. H., Congressman Gardner says that he is in doubt as to whether the Boston & Maine railroads should be separated from the New Haven, but declared that the roads must be freed from the control of trunk line railroads and express companies, if such control exists, as alleged.

Two rallies were held by Congressman Gardner last night at New Bedford, one in the rink in the center of the city and the other at the North End.

United States Senator John W. Weeks has accepted an invitation to speak before the Massachusetts state grange at Worcester on Oct. 29. He will discuss the protection of birds. After his Worcester speech Senator Weeks plans to make several speeches for the Republican state ticket, beginning at the Republican rally at Tremont Temple on the night of Nov. 1. He expects to follow this speech with several in the third congressional district.

Congressman Ernest W. Roberts will also speak for the Republican ticket.

Leaving the Berkshire hills where he spoke last night to audiences in Adams, North Adams and Pittsfield, Lieut. Gov. David I. Walsh, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate comes down into the Connecticut river valley tonight where he is due to speak at rallies in Northampton, Easthampton, Holyoke, Springfield and Chicopee.

At Pittsfield last night Mr. Walsh discussed the railroad issue.

Other Democratic rallies are scheduled to be held tonight at Palmer, Brookfield and Weymouth with Edward P. Barry of Boston as chief speaker.

John W. Davis, solicitor general of the United States, is to be the leading speaker at Saturday night's Democratic ratification meeting at Tremont Temple. It is said that he will come on from Washington as the representative of President Wilson's administration.

Mayor Fitzgerald, George Fred Williams and Sherman L. Whipple also are listed among the speakers.

Governor Foss in No Hurry

Governor Foss is inclined to put off active campaigning until the last week or 10 days before the election. He has told his campaign committee that he needs only that much time to enable him to reach and pass his several opponents.

Report has it that manufacturers have offered to help finance the Governor's campaign because of his firm stand against leaders of organized labor, and some who are close to the Governor verify it.

The Governor has given out copies of a letter from Charles M. Gardner in which the latter calls attention to a plank in the Progressive party platform calling for the amendment of the state constitution, that cities and towns may have power "to tax land at a higher rate than improvements thereon."

Mr. Gardner says that this would permit the single tax, or taxation of land values only, and might be made to bear severely on the farmer whose property consists principally of land.

Mr. Bird Spent $1595

Charles Sumner Bird's returns filed at the State House yesterday say that he spent for his nomination for Governor $1506.72, of which the largest item was $1080, paid his secretary, John F. Ryan.

Edward P. Barry made return that he paid for his nomination for Lieutenant-Governor on the Democratic ticket $1551.30, of which $501.50 was paid to H. A. Kenny for advertising and publicity.

Sanford Bates, candidate for the House in the twenty-fourth Suffolk district, paid $8.33 for his Progressive nomination and $25.75 for his Republican nomination.

Martin Lomasney spent $54.84 for renomination to the House. Other returns include: Eben S. Keith, councillor, $196.02; Eugene E. Davis, Northampton, county commissioner, $101.25; Henry L. Bowles, Springfield, councillor, $300; Edward S. Frothingham, Haverhill, councillor, $356.20; Charles L. Gifford, Cotuit, senator, $30; Calvin Coolidge, Northampton, senator, $35; John C. Sanborn, Lawrence, senator, $35; William E. Rogers, register of probate, Middlesex, $40; G. Frederick Simpson, Newton, councillor, $41.20.

PLAN FOR HOUSE RECESS IS BLOCKED BY LEADER MANN

He Declares Currency Bill Will Not Be Reported in November Nor Passed in December

WASHINGTON—Plans of administration leaders in the House for a 30-day recess were abandoned because Republican Leader Mann refused to yield in his determination to keep the House in session as long as the Senate awaits action on the currency bill in committee.

"The currency bill will not be reported, as the President says, the first week in November," declared Mr. Mann. "It will not be passed in December."

"Everybody knows except the President that the bill will not be passed now, and if Congress wants to submit to the direction of the President and remain in session, we ought to fish or cut bait. If the reports of an ambitious legislative program next winter are true, Congress had better get busy on it now or it will be here next year at this time."

Demands that senators either "resign or go to work"; that absent members be brought back to Washington by the use of "any force that may be necessary," and that the pretence "of trying to do business without a quorum be ended," marked the opening of Tuesday's session of the Senate.

A double roll-call brought in only 45 senators, and sergeants-at-arms began to scour Washington for absentees. Later all absent senators were summoned by telegraph to return to Washington. The Senate finally secured a quorum, but the demand for the return of absent members will not be relaxed.

CONGRESSMEN TO HAVE $1000 ROOMS

WASHINGTON—An average of nearly $1000 a room for the furnishing of the 53 new offices for congressmen that are being added to the House office building, was approved Tuesday by the Senate. A bill was passed appropriating $50,000 for the furnishings.

MISSION SOCIETY FILLS OFFICES

WASHINGTON—The Woman's Home Missionary Society of the Methodist church Tuesday elected Mrs. P. H. Bodkin of Los Angeles as vice-president and Mrs. Delia Williams of Delaware, O., corresponding secretary. The society closes its annual convention today.

EVERETT HAS TRADE PAPER

THOUSANDS CHEER MR. SULZER AS HE RETURNS TO NEW YORK

Parade Which Escorts Him from Station to Progressive Headquarters in Sixth District Halts at Tammany Hall While Crowd Cheers Deposed Governor

NEW YORK—The East Side welcomed William Sulzer home last night. When he and Mrs. Sulzer got off the train which had brought them from Albany, thousands of his cheering supporters were gathered at the station. A taxicab parade of the leaders in the sixth district who have nominated him for the Assembly escorted the deposed governor through the streets.

The route led past Tammany hall, where the parade was halted while the crowd cheered Mr. Sulzer and his Tammany. In front of Progressive headquarters in the sixth district, Mr. Sulzer said:

"Friends, I have come back home."

"I want to go back to Albany to represent you and not Mr. Murphy; to represent the people and not the bosses who removed me because I stood by the people, and I know that the people are going to stand by me. My heart is too full tonight to talk further, but I shall be back again tomorrow night to tell you things that will make you blush with shame for the citizenship of the state, which is in the clutches of a boss who says he will destroy you if you do not do his bidding."

ALBANY, N. Y.—Plans for William Sulzer's campaign for the Assembly were made just before he left for New York Tuesday. Today several of his advisers followed him to New York to assist him in his campaign. Among his guests at the last meal he ate in the executive mansion was James C. Garrison, who, due to his criticism of some of the anti-Sulzer assemblymen, brought himself into contempt of the Assembly, and has

CUBA PRESIDENT ISSUES APPEAL TO THE PEOPLE

Addresses Public on Urgency of Need of Loan of $15,000,000 to Pay Debts When Houses Refuse to Give a Quorum

WANTS CASH AT ONCE

HAVANA—Because of the refusal of the Cuban Congress to convene in extraordinary session to consider the presidential message urgently recommending a new outside loan of $15,000,000, President Mario Menocal Monday night issued an appeal to the people, in which he intimates that he may be compelled to have recourse to extraordinary measures in the event of continued obstinacy on the part of Congress.

President Menocal says he has been compelled to address himself directly to the people by reason of the condition of public affairs, produced by the lack of a quorum in both houses of Congress.

The President explains that the urgency of the loan is caused by the necessity of paying off the indebtedness incurred by the previous Liberal administration.

President Menocal does not state in his appeal to the people what course he intends to pursue in case the houses of Congress remain obdurate.

WASHINGTON—State department officials were interested Tuesday night in the situation which has arisen in Havana as a result of the refusal of the Cuban Congress to convene in extraordinary session to consider the proposed foreign loan.

The presence of two thirds of both houses is required under the Cuban constitution in order to convene Congress, and there is no provision for the arrest of enough absentees to constitute a quorum, as may be done under the American system.

Although the Cuban President can adjourn Congress, it was pointed out that he cannot dissolve that body and call for new elections, and that the Congress was elected last April for two years.

No statement of the attitude of the American state department could be obtained, although it is known that the United States several months ago under the authority vested in it by the Platt amendment, received from President Menocal a request for permission to negotiate the loan and acceded to the proposition.

AVIATION CHIEF ASSUMES POST

ALBANY, N. Y.—"In the future the men who are the visible government will endeavor to map out the visible policy of the state administration," Governor Glynn said in announcing his plan for weekly conferences with the other state officials.

The Governor said that "the elected department heads are just as responsible for its good government as the Governor. The people elect them," he continued, "and the administration, in a way, must stand or fall on their action and cooperation with the Governor."

FASHIONS AND THE HOUSEHOLD

SLATE HAS MANY ADVANTAGES

Tin, tiles, and other roofing materials

WHY don't we see more of the tin roofs that were used so extensively on some of the old New England houses? asked a would-be house builder of an architect.

"People have gotten out of the way of using them, I suppose. They require careful painting when they are laid, and they should be painted at least every five years with a good roofing paint. Tin-roofing material with a good percentage of copper in it may be had, and I can tell you of no better roof when it is properly laid. It need not be painted a hideous red, as so many tin roofs are, but various other colors, notably soft grays or greens, may be used with good effect."

"I've heard a great deal about canvas as a roofing."

"Well, for that balcony you mentioned it would be just the thing," he answered. "It is the same sort of thing that is used for steamboat decks, and it is, in fact, generally known as deckcloth. It is fast becoming popular for porch floors, or roofs which must be walked on. It has been made thoroughly waterproof and surprisingly strong."

"Laidlaw, who built that colonial house I told you about, favors slate for a roof," said I.

"And well he might," was the reply. "It is very suitable for his type of house, and for many other kinds. Slate has many advantages that are worth considering. First, it is in the unburnable class. Then it wears forever."

"As I have told you, it comes next in cost to shingles. It is costlier not only for the material and the more skill required to lay it, but also because the construction underneath the slate must be heavier than that required for shingles. It is the practice to lay slate over tarred or felt paper. A vexing question with slate is that which has to do with its breakability. Slate is brittle. The nail-holes, made with sharp pointed utensils, must be drilled carefully, and latter-day artisans have apparently forgotten how to be careful, and they waste a great deal. But, once you have a well-laid slate roof, you have something that will last. If you could see some of the wonderful old slate roofs of European countries, some laid for hundreds of years, you would be strongly inclined toward this material. It comes in a variety of colorings, so that your 'bit of color' could be taken care of."

"How about tile?"

"Fireproof, indestructible, and last, but not least, beautiful, is the story of terracotta tile in a nutshell. It is one of the oldest of roofing materials, and yet one of the most modern. Many people think that tile is adapted only for houses of the Spanish mission or Italian type, but its use is becoming more general than any one realizes.

"It is being made, today, in such a variety of patterns and colors that the roofs may be made to conform to the architect's scheme for the building itself, and so that your 'bit of color,' to quote you, again, readily harmonizes with whatever color you may select for the structure as a whole. Tile is laid like slate, with copper or galvanized nails. The cost is higher than that of most other materials, but when the permanency of tile and its fireproof qualities, together with the beautiful results obtainable from its wonderfully soft colorings, are figured in, it is distinctly worth while."

"Besides the terra-cotta tiles, there are many kinds of metal-tile roofing that look well, and wear well, and fulfill that first requirement of every good roof—to be storm-proof and watertight."

"Another kind of roofing for certain kinds of work is that best known as ready roofing—the kind that comes in rolls, all ready to put down."—Suburban Life.

COLOR A BIG FACTOR THIS YEAR

Shades that will be most generally seen in clothes

IN THE new fashions it is the color emphasis that counts this year. To be really fashionable one must consider it. The way of buying a dress a few years ago was not to pay particular attention to the color combination. The truth is there was not much combination to consider. If blue was liked, one bought a blue dress, or if brown was considered a practical, good-wearing color, then it was brown that was chosen, and the dress was generally trimmed in the self-same tone. That is really about all the color question amounted to.

Today the position of color in fashions is on an entirely different basis, writes Grace Margaret Gould in the Woman's Home Companion. If madam considers herself a fashionable and wishes to purchase some new gowns for the coming season, she not only consults her own preference but an artist, as well as her dressmaker.

The painter and the dressmaker are today collaborating, with the result that the new fashions show much originality in design and many daring color combinations. It is true that the new fashions show the influence of modern art.

MAKING THE HOME ATTRACTIVE

Pleasures should be provided for children

MAKING home attractive for the children has come to be one of the important questions of the homemaker. Outside attractions are made more interesting every year, and there is the necessity for the home attractions to keep pace with them.

Of foremost importance in making an attractive home is the attitude of parents and children toward each other, and their becoming friends and companions together. Much is said of mothers of the present time becoming so interested in the topics of the day, in clubs and intellectual pursuits, that they have little time for homemaking. This may be true in extreme cases, but it is noticed that usually the higher ideas of education, broader knowledge of social and economic problems, and larger views of the duties and possibilities of homemaking which may be gained from clubs and other outside influences, are conducive to better home conditions and closer comradeship between children and parents. Outside interests, however, or purely utilitarian matters, such as keeping the clothing in order, keeping the house, or earning the living, are not sufficient excuse to keep the fathers and mothers from becoming closely associated with their children as real friends and comrades.

One of the strongest ties with which to bind a boy to his home is a room fitted up exclusively for his use; where he can have his toys and games, books, pictures and school souvenirs, and to which he will be free to invite his chums. Freedom in the home is something which all boys do not have, but which they appreciate, particularly in a room devoted to their exclusive use.

Music is always an attractive feature in the home, and, if every member of the family is taught to play some instrument, it is sure to go a long way in solving the problem of how to keep the boy at home. If he is not particularly interested in the study of music, it may be a waste of time to carry the instruction to any great extent, but it may go far enough so that he will be enabled to contribute his part to the merry evenings at home. In one attractive home the children look forward to their weekly concert on Friday night, when no lessons are to be learned for the following day. There are sure to be invitations sent to some of their young friends, who are given a hearty welcome by the parents. In the orchestra are two violins, a piano, mandolin and mouth organ, and the pet dog is taught to stand on his hind legs and "speak" as his part in the entertainment.

Another subject of interest to a boy is that of pets. Although some housewives deem it a nuisance to have animals about the house, the love and care which children give to them is ennobling and refining, if they are taught to be kind to them. The country home is not complete without them, but it is not always so convenient to keep them in the city; yet this may be done satisfactorily in the crowded sections, as has been proven by one boy who turned an unused basement room into a small menagerie, and the dogs, rabbits, angora cat and raccoon formed a happy family, in the company of which the proud possessor spent many delightful hours every day.

Adding to these attractions any speciality which the children may particularly desire, and a spirit of love, good cheer, sympathy and appreciation of one another's efforts and an unselfishness and thoughtfulness for others' comfort and happiness, will render a home so attractive that the children will have no desire to spend their spare time outside.

MODES IN BRIEF

While the beautiful brocades have every appearance of weight and body, they are actually light and unusually supple.

One of the newest motor coats has a strapped collar which crosses over the chest, surplice fashion, fastening below the waistline with large buttons and buttonholes.

Challie with the Juoy or Dresden designs are used for charming little house gowns; they are exceptionally dainty for children's frocks, too.

Gowns for street, house or evening wear are trimmed with fur. As a matter of fact, fur is combined with all materials from the heaviest of velours or plush to the lightest weight filmy silk stuffs.—Newark News.

HINT TO BRIDES

If before acknowledging her wedding presents the bride will provide herself with an illustrated catalogue from one of the mail order silver houses, she will have no difficulty identifying unfamiliar pieces and calling them by their right names in her notes of thanks; says the Indianapolis News. Each season brings its novelties and, especially away from the shopping centers, the young woman is sometimes bewildered by the plateaux, the sandwich tongs, the sliced-lemon fork, the teapot tile and such newer things that come to her. One bride was much perplexed by a silver acorn with a screw underneath until a catalogue was produced and it was discovered to be a Dutch cheese knob.

DRESS SKIRT ORNAMENTED

A GIRL who had a white marquisette dress which she wore over a white silk slip, grew tired of the solid white and altered it with a little color in this way, writes a contributor to the Woman's Home Companion.

She purchased one half yard of wide cretonne which had a design of medallions of baskets and garlands of roses on an ecru background. Then she carefully cut out with sharp scissors all the baskets and garlands and basted them on her silk slip in such a way that the garlands of festoons of roses looked as if they were draped and caught in a joined row at the top of the flounce; the medallions of baskets were placed here and there over the skirt. They were then buttonholed in place with soft white embroidery cotton.

When finished the frock looked like an imported gown with these dainty colored designs showing through the sheer marquisette.

SEEN IN SHOPS

Brass muffin stands with real lace doilies set beneath the glass of the tray are very handsome.

One of the white lined nickel plated baking dishes may be used for puddings as well as for vegetables.

An after-dinner set on a revolving tray is a table appointment that is especially appreciated when there is no maid.

The Japanese fern balls, which need only to be immersed in water and then hung in the sunshine to put forth tender green leaves, are just the thing for winter house decoration.

Pillow covers for the couch are made of jute in attractive colorings.

Plaid hosiery in more or less subdued patterns is among the stocking novelties.

Leatherette scrap baskets are of artistic design and excellent colorings.

Flower holders of brass wire are a novelty, according to the Newark News. There is a weighted metal base from which spring several wires, each topped with a ring. The stems of the flowers are held in position by means of the rings. These are specially designed for tall vases.

A kitchen cabinet of metal instead of wood, is one of the newest things in household furnishings. It is equipped much as the wooden cabinet.

RADIATOR HIDDEN

More and more have the radiators become articles of ornament, says the Hartford Courant. In a dining room they may be converted into decorative cabinets to be used for heating plant for dishes or a tiny greenhouse, again they are covered with a brass cap and hidden with metal curtains. As a fireplace or hidden under a window sill, the radiator is often a charming piece of furnishing for a room.

TRIED RECIPES

TAPIoca AND MILK SOUP

WASH half a cup of tapioca and soak it six hours in two cups of cold water, then put it in a double boiler and cook for an hour. In another double boiler scald a quart of milk. Put two tablespoonsful of butter in a frying pan and when melted add a medium sized onion and two blades of celery chopped fine, and cook slowly for 10 minutes. Add two tablespoonsful of flour, stir until smooth and frothy. Pour into the scalded milk. Add salt, pepper, and celery salt to taste, and cook 10 minutes longer, then strain into the tapioca and cook, covered, for an hour. If you prefer nutmeg flavoring, use it in place of celery salt.

SCALLOPED ONIONS

Boil medium-sized white onions in salted water until they are tender, changing the water twice and adding a little milk to the fresh boiling water added the third time. When done, drain, and put a layer of onions in a baking dish, scatter bread crumbs over them, dot with butter, seasoning of salt and pepper and dash of powdered sage. Fill the dish up in this manner and pour over the onions half a cup of cream or milk or a very thin white sauce. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake a light brown. Serve hot.

LUNCHEON BISCUIT

Take a pound of bread dough on baking day, or raise a small sponge overnight and use part of it for muffins for breakfast and make up the biscuit for luncheon; to the pound of dough add a tablespoon of shortening, two tablespoonsful of sugar, and roll into a thin sheet; cut in two, spread half a cup each of raisins and currants over one half; add an ounce each of lemon peel and citron, chopped fine, if the biscuit are for luncheon, lay on the other half and pat down with the hand until the two layers will hold together; then cut in rounds, squares or triangles, brush with white of egg, and let raise for an hour. Bake in a hot oven for 15 minutes.

PICKLED RED CABBAGE

Slice a solid head of red cabbage in strips, sprinkle lightly with salt, and let stand overnight; in the morning drain and cover with boiling vinegar, to which add a dozen cloves, two dozen peppercorns and sugar to suit your taste.

POTATO PANCAKES

Grate 10 good-sized potatoes into a pan of cold water. When all are grated, drain in a fine sieve or piece of cheesecloth, pressing out all the water. To the pulp add four eggs and two teaspoonsful salt. Have the griddle very hot and well greased. Put in two tablespoonsful of the batter and spread out in a flat cake; bake to a crisp brown on both sides. Do not use the least bit of flour, or you will spoil them for German potato pancakes.—Washington Herald.

STARCH NOT VERY GOOD FOR LINEN

Do not starch any linen, and if you wish to have it look its best iron it damp, says Harpers Bazar. Starch ruins linen. Hang all sheets, tablecloths and towels on the drying line with the ends down so that the weight, when wet, will come on the lengthwise threads, which are the stronger. Otherwise the linen will show an inclination to split along the folds.

Linen yellowed by long lying may be whitened by adding kerosene to the water when boiling. About a tablespoonful to a gallon of water is the correct proportion. After tablecloths are folded lengthwise they may be kept smooth by rolling on pasteboard mailing tubes. A ribbon may be run through the tube and tied first across the cloth and then around the tube in two places, to keep the ends in place. This is a good way to keep linen centerpieces smooth. If, however, the rolling is done when the linen is still damp, the centerpieces will continue to roll as they lie on the table.

TO BRIGHTEN TILE

To make red tiles a nice, bright, clear color rub well with a lemon dipped in fine salt. Leave it for a few minutes, then wash in the usual way. The tiles will be a nice, clear red, with all stains removed.

OLD CONGRESS HALL TO BE REDEDICATED

Old Congress hall in Philadelphia restored to practically its original condition

Historic Philadelphia Building Restored and Will Be Filled with Famous Guests, Including the President and Ambassadors

NOW AS IN EARLY DAYS

PHILADELPHIA, Pa.—An ancient building which Philadelphia cherishes with a regard second only to that which she bestows upon Independence hall itself is to be rededicated on next Saturday. Old Congress hall, now restored exactly to that earlier state as when it housed the federal Legislature for the first decade of the national life, then will entertain as notable a company of guests as could well be assembled in all the republic. The President, the Vice-President and the speaker of the House will be here. The two branches of Congress will send committees, each equal in number to the representatives or senators who here held their deliberations when 16 was the total of the states. The governors of those 16 commonwealths will attend, as will the ambassadors of England, France and Spain, and, of course, the officials of the Quaker city.

As the coming of such men must show, the occasion is one of not less than national importance, for throughout the length and breadth of the land there are scarce a half dozen edifices to compare in interest with this, in which Washington took oath for his second administration, where the elder Adams took oath four years later, and where "The Father of His Country" stood at last to deliver his historic farewell. It is to be added that the present chief executive will stand on precisely the selfsame spot when he delivers his address on Oct. 25.

All Philadelphia and a good part of the rest of the American world knows the building, standing at the western end of Independence hall, on the corner of Sixth and Chestnut streets. Within its venerable walls of warm red brick, and lit by the small-paned windows of revolutionary times, the municipal courts sat for three generations; till so recently indeed as 1895. Since that date the hall has been unused. During the period of its legal occupancy many alterations of necessity had been made till it had lost much of its character as left in 1800, when Congress moved south to the just-completed national capital at Washington. Thrice, too, the structure has been affire, though never much damaged. Its restoration has been demanded for a score of years, and now under the wise direction of a committee appointed jointly from the American Institute of Architects and the Philadelphia commission for the preservation of historic memorials, it has been carried through with complete success.

The actual work, made financially possible through a city appropriation of $70,000 has required some 15 months. Every contemporary picture and description of the interior was studied. The walls were scraped, floors and ceilings probed for what information they might conceal, and as the various alterations were, one by one, removed, much came to light to lead the laborers in their task. Marks in the House flooring were come upon, for instance, indicating beyond all question where once ran a rail to separate members from visitors. And in the ceiling of the Senate chamber was uncovered that famed eagle with the thunderbolts clasped in his claws, painted there above the Vice-President's desk and platform.

Old Things Restored

An original mantelpiece which for many years had been used as the top of a doorway was furnished the design for all the mantelpieces in the building. The original fireplaces have also been restored, in several instances the original marble being already in place. This marble has been carefully matched and has been used in other fireplaces hidden for years from view. The building will not be heated in the original manner, however, but by a hot-air system, a decision reached as much on the ground of safety as of comfort. In the same way, a metal fire-proof roof has been put on the building beneath its new hat of shingles.

With all this work completed the general interior plans of the hall now show but a single apartment on the first floor, the old House of Representatives, and the vestibule from the entrance on Chestnut street. On the second floor are four committee rooms to the north and the Senate chamber to the south.

There is a general plainness about the interior which called for self-control from the members of the committee to resist the temptation to make it a little more classic. Yet the plainness has the advantage of impressing the visitor with the faithfulness of their work and strengthens him in the belief that it is actually restoration and not imaginative genius.

It is an eloquent history, that of old Congress hall. The preface tells of the plans of Andrew Hamilton, Esq.—he whose splendid estate "Woodlands" is to this day still a show place to those with enough love of colonial architecture and continental history to seek it out in West Philadelphia—which were for a court house worthy of the broad holdings of proprietor Penn. Laid before the Assembly in 1736 the proposal was not acted upon till '62, when an enabling act was duly passed. But affairs moved in a leisurely way in those days. The stamp act was promulgated and tardily repealed, and the continental congresses met first at Carpenters and then at Independence halls, and the revolution ran out its eight-year course, all before so much as a spadeful of earth was turned on the site of the building yet to be. In the late '80s it was begun, probably 1787, to judge from the date cut into the stone stringpiece over the entry and just beneath the iron work of the second-story balcony. Two years more and it had been rushed to completion, to the staggering tune of $16,000!—for Robert Morris was trying to persuade the Congress of the infant nation, then sitting over in New York, to make Philadelphia its home, and some sort of fit residence for the lawmakers must be at hand to offer them, to give point to the urgings of the financing statesman.

Congress in Philadelphia

Congress accepted the invitation. The supreme executive council of Pennsylvania, which had occupied the hall for a few short months, hurriedly gave place. Major L'Enfant who had in charge the somewhat elaborate plans for a federal district further south, was sent here to supervise the putting of the building into adequate order for its august tenants and he lengthened it by 30 feet. And here it may be parenthetically set to paper that that gentleman never foresaw that visitors might seek the Senate, for he made no least provision for such that was left to a special act of the upper chamber's self, from which sprang the graceful gallery which now runs across the end of the room where they deliberated for a decade.

The third session of the First Congress of the independent states convened in Congress hall on Dec. 6, 1790. The Sixth Congress last sat here on May 14, 1800. And within that decade while first Adams and then Jefferson presided over the Senate, with the House governed in turn by Speakers Muhlenberg of Pennsylvania, Trumbull of Connecticut, Dayton of New Jersey and Sedgwick of Massachusetts, what vitally big matters were debated and decided, pro and con. Three sovereign states were added to the original baker's dozen: Vermont, Kentucky and Tennessee. The constitution was then amended by 10 several paragraphs guaranteeing freedom of religion, speech, person and property to American citizens. The first mint was established. The Bank of the United States was created—whence came the Grecian structure yet standing on Third street below Chestnut, now the Girard National. The great Washington took oath of office for his second term. Wayne's treaty with the West Indies was (barely) approved, and the Jay treaty with Great Britain ratified in the face of a popular opposition which never justified itself. There in 1798 were passed those un-American alien and sedition laws, with the peppery Kentucky and Virginia resolutions so promptly following. There John Adams took the presidential oath. There the first President read his farewell address, and there, during the silent sorrow of the assembled members Chief Justice Marshall announced the passing of that great and good man, with that since historic phrase: "First in war; first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen."

In restoring such a structure to at least approximately its original condition, and in preserving it thus for the veneration of all time to come, Philadelphia has done a work richly worthy of the ceremonial which will mark its offering to the general public.

usual reading and social rooms a gymnasium, a swimming pool, bowling alleys, manual training department, billiard room and 34 furnished dormitory rooms. The building and its equipment cost nearly $100,000.

Ft. Collins' population is about 9000, including many retired business men from various parts of the country who have been attracted here by the excellent climate, beautiful mountain scenery, the educational facilities and good order. There are no saloons here. The city is about 5000 feet above sea-level. It has several pieces of land for park purposes, some of which have been improved and are beautiful spots; others will be developed as fast as possible. All are easily accessible.

One of the popular points enjoyed by the residents is Lindenmier lake, about two miles away and to be reached by street car in 20 minutes. The Country Club owns about 147 acres of land two miles north of the city and has built an attractive clubhouse. It has an excellent golf course and tennis courts. Besides what is said to be the largest beet sugar factory in Colorado there are various industries, including two large flouring mills, a brick plant, tile manufacturing and alfalfa feed mill.

The city is in the northern part of what is called northern Colorado, which is said to be the oldest and best developed general farming region under irrigation. The soil is excellent, the sun shines 85 days in every 100 and the proper amount of water for plants is exactly regulated by the artificial means. Truck gardening is carried on with encouraging success.

Crops here found most profitable to be sent to distant markets are apples, cherries, raspberries, plums, potatoes, onions, cabbage, cauliflower and celery. Rotation of crops is an important feature, and it is believed that more profitable results are to be had from cultivation of 10 or 20 acres in this district than on a farm from four to eight times as large in the unirrigated sections of the East.

It is estimated that a farmer here should be able to realize $3000 a year from 20 acres skillfully handled. Poultry raising is regarded as one of the most reliable sources of income. Other agricultural lines followed successfully are cattle, sheep and hog raising, dairying, grain growing and bee culture.

14,000,000 Bushels According to Labor Commission Report

OMAHA, Neb. — Nebraska's wheat yield this year exceeded that of 1912, the previous record of over 14,000,000 bushels, according to the annual bulletin of the labor commission given out by Commissioner Pool, says the News. The total in 1913 was 64,725,348 bushels. Of this winter wheat had 59,846,834 and spring wheat 4,889,514 bushels. In 1912 the total yield was 50,663,097.

The average yield of winter wheat this year was 18.51 bushels per acre, and the spring wheat average 12.93. Figuring the crop at 75 cents per bushel, the money value is $48,589,011. This is nearly $4,000,000 more than the people of the state have invested in automobiles, the report says.

The state has 69,752 wheat land owners and 49,353 tenants worked farms containing 31,552,998 acres.

VANCOUVER BUSY WITH NARROWS

VANCOUVER, B. C.—The dredging of the first 200 feet on the north side of the First Narrows has been practically completed, announces J. Nelson, superintendent of the work for the Dominion government. By a recent order of the Ottawa authorities, however, the channel on the north side is to be increased to 400 feet as well as deepened from 30 feet to 40 feet, says the Province.

The city waterworks department, whose pipes were intended to cross where the dredging has taken place, is hauling its pipe back another 200 feet. Waterworks Superintendent Maddison said that the city's work in dredging a slope down to the channel on which to lay the pipes would be undone and that the city would have to dredge a similar slope when the other 200 foot strip is to be dug.

MISSOURI RIVER RATES UPHELD

OREGON OFFICIALLY CHOSEN TO LEAD WAY THROUGH PANAMA

WASHINGTON—Secretary Daniels formally designated Tuesday the battleship Oregon, which made the famous trip around Cape Horn in the early days of the Spanish war, to lead the great international fleet through the Panama canal in 1915, when the waterway is formally opened.

It is possible that Secretary Daniels will be aboard with President Wilson. It has been proposed, too, that all surviving officers who served on the Oregon during the 1898 cruise be again at their posts of duty, and if so the Oregon would be commanded by Rear Admiral Charles E. Clark, retired, now living in Washington.

The acceptance by the British foreign office of the invitation from the United States to send a squadron of British warships to go through the canal with the international fleet, was conveyed Tuesday to Secretary Bryan through Ambassador Page.

Felix Diaz Arrives at Veracruz

Huerta Agents Board Steamer Before General Lands and Vainly Try to Get Him to Withdraw From Election

TROOPS KEEP ORDER

VERACRUZ—Gen. Felix Diaz arrived here today from Havana aboard the German steamship Corcovado. A silent crowd greeted him at the pier, because of the popular impression that Provisional President Huerta had ordered the soldiers to suppress public celebration.

The German warship Bertha, despatched to Mexican waters to protect German interests, arrived off Veracruz simultaneously with the Corcovado. The warship entered the harbor with the passenger boat but remained off the quay.

The Zaragoza met the Corcovado last night, five miles off Veracruz and Gen. Manuel Vidaurazaga, private secretary to General Blanquet, former war minister and Sr. Huerta's candidate for Vice-President, boarded the vessel. He had a conference with Sr. Diaz lasting several hours, in which he endeavored to obtain the general's promise not to land, but Sr. Diaz refused to agree.

Again today, before the steamer docked, efforts were made to dissuade Sr. Diaz from entering Mexico before the elections, but they were futile. Sr. Diaz refused to make any promises or to give indication of his probable actions.

The entire city was vigilantly policed and federal soldiers were to be seen everywhere. Their presence dampened the ardor of the Diazists to a considerable extent.

After his pleadings with Sr. Diaz, General Vidaurazaga left the Corcovado and went to military headquarters for a conference with the military commander of Veracruz and to communicate with General Huerta in Mexico City.

once and several of them have made preliminary reports.

The chairman called attention to the fact that the directors and officers have been very busy of late in dealing with large questions.

Minor matters which some of the stockholders mentioned to the directors would be taken up as rapidly as possible, Mr. Elliott said.

He stated that he was receiving the heartiest cooperation of the directors, and then made a strong plea for cooperation by the stockholders by trying to shape public sentiment in favor of the company.

STOCKHOLDERS GO ON SPECIAL TRAIN

Two private cars, the Connecticut and No. 444, were used to convey the stockholders of the New Haven railroad from the South station today on a special train to New Haven, Conn., where they are to attend the annual meeting of the company.

An innovation is the holding of the meeting in Harmonie hall on Elm street, instead of in the small room adjoining the directors' room in the railroad building. Harmonie hall has a seating capacity of about 400.

Solos with which the soprano introduced herself to the public were Puccini's "Tosca" aria and Bizet's aria of Micaela in "Carmen." The associate artists gave groups of solos and Mme. Keon, Mr. Harris and Mr. De Segurora performed the trio from Gounod's "Faust."

SUFFRAGAN BISHOPS FAIL TO GET VOTE

NEW YORK—It is announced that the Protestant Episcopal house of bishops has voted against the proposal to give a vote in the house of bishops to the suffragan bishops. This proposal was brought up in the house of deputies at the Cincinnati convention in 1910 and was defeated there.

The only other action announced at the general convention here is the defeat of the proposed amendment to the constitution, handed down from the last convention, making it necessary for the standing committees of all dioceses to consent to the election of a suffragan bishop.

STREET ORDER AGAIN VETOED

INDIAN OFFICE ANNUAL REPORT BEING RUSHED

WASHINGTON—Officials of the Indian office say the annual report of the Indian commissioner is being prepared as rapidly as possible, and is to be made public as quickly as completed. It is not being held up, nor is there any disposition to withhold it from the public. Cato Sells, Indian commissioner, only came into office last June, and one of the causes of the delay has to do with that fact, and with other matters of office routine due to the change of administration, it is explained.

MR. BRYAN ASKED TO SPEAK HERE

MORE CARE IN INDIAN AFFAIRS MOHONK PLEA

of more careful handling of the property of Indians now held in reserve and awaiting division. The immediate increase of values of lands producing oil, coal and asphalt, and owned either collectively or by individual Indians has incited the cupidity of crafty whites and half breeds.

Attention has been called to the rising issue of state vs. national authority and the necessity of the state assuming responsibility for greater educational service for the Indians. The legality of much federal expenditure is being questioned. Sentiment also is prevalent urging putting upon the Indians who are not of restricted class of ever increasing liberty and control of his own property.

The prompt payment of all moneys due the Indians and pledged to them is recommended by some of the Oklahomans present, but other friends of the Indians present justify some delay until education has prepared minors for use of the wealth which is their due.

Congressman William H. Murray of Oklahoma, who was president of the Oklahoma constitutional convention and first speaker of the Oklahoma House of Representatives, in discussing the question, "Toward the Restricted and the Unrestricted Indians of the Five Civilized Tribes, Should the Law and its Administration Be the Same?" said in part:

The word "restricted" Indian means those who have some restriction upon the alienation of all or any portion of their allotment and homestead. Such restrictions apply only to the land and run with its title, rather than upon the person of the individual, since the Indian in Oklahoma enjoys the privilege of the ballot and the right to be elected to public office and is in every other way classed as a white man under our constitution.

The greatest trouble, particularly to the Indian himself, is in the case of the probate of the minors' estates, and although the first Legislature enacted a statute directed against certain probate judges here and there a county judge will win success upon some private agreement to do the bidding of the grafter who has so beset the Indians everywhere. Estates of minors are probated and sold without necessity, therefore, and then, in countries where honest men hold these positions it is even done by deception and by false information presented to the court.

In the administration by the department of the interior they have overlooked the fact that there was a distinction between the "restricted" and "unrestricted," when as a matter of truth, their authority over the restricted class, not only in the matter of alienation, but in the improving, leasing or other encumbering of the lands, both surplus and homestead, should be more completely under the control of the department, with a view of preventing a clouding of the title; whereas, upon the unrestricted class, and even some of the partially restricted class, the rule should be relaxed so as to give to the Indian complete control touching the alienation, leasing or encumbering of his own property. If this were done it would take away the effort of the intelligent class to widen restrictions, and break down department authority upon all classes, and it would lessen the tendency of political influence in favor of removing all departmental control.

In the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations, if not in all the other five civilized tribes, would close the doors against either departmental removal or sale, or authority of probate courts to sell a minor's land, limiting them only to the question of leasing out the property, and that with a view of having it improved in the case of full bloods, and collect the rents, or adequate compensation for their property in the case of the restricted or unrestricted child.

I desire to quote here from the Democratic state platform of 1912, and I may say that this is the view of practically everybody in our state with reference to this Indian problem, so far as it speaks upon it:

"We oppose the re-opening of the tribal rolls, which would result in unsettled conditions, and, by fraud and perjury, admit persons to a participation in tribal estate not entitled to such division. We favor such legislation by Congress as will settle Indian land titles, alike just to the Indian and to the white purchaser and homeseeker. The Democratic party stands for an honest policy and for keeping our pledges to the Indian. It believes it equally wrong to permit the robber by law or its administration of either the white man or the Indian. We are opposed to the taking by the government of the Indian trust funds, amounting to millions of dollars, in paying salaries and expenses of federal office holders and departmental appointees, after agreeing by solemn treaty pledges to pay such expenses by the federal government."

PROFIT-SHARING IS DISCUSSED BY GEO. W. PERKINS

Profit-sharing which permits of cooperation that is thorough and efficient between employer and employee, was advocated by George W. Perkins of New York at the membership meeting of the Boston Chamber of Commerce held in the Boston City Club last night. The speaker was introduced to the gathering by James J. Storrow, president of the chamber.

Mr. Perkins said: "Today the workers are not striking simply for a definite increase of wages; they are striking for what they believe to be a fair proportion of the profits of the business in which they are employed."

"This being so, we are passing the line where labor disputes can be settled by increases in wages, to where profit-sharing in some form can be practised."

West Chester Has Rare Industry

Busy Pennsylvania Municipality.
Educational Center, Possesses
Only Mushroom Spawn Plant
East of Mississippi

BUT TWO IN THE U. S.

WEST CHESTER, Pa.—With the West Chester state normal school located here in addition to seven other up-to-date public or private schools, this town has become the recognized educational center of Chester county as well as the county seat. West Chester also has attained some note from the fact that the growing of mushrooms and the manufacture of mushroom spawn recently has become one of the large industries of the town.

Situated in a county that is rich in mines and quarries, the first of the three original counties established by William Penn, founder of the state of Pennsylvania, West Chester has a population of more than 12,000 and is on high ground, 456 feet above the sea. Its surroundings have been said to resemble strongly the best portions of rural England.

Two lines of railway connect West Chester with Philadelphia, 10½ miles away in a straight line but about 32 miles in actual distance owing to the windings of the way. One of these lines connects with the main line of the Pennsylvania railroad for the West. West Chester has a scientific and literary societies, private collections of minerals, shells, curiosities, relics; museums and libraries are numerous and some of them of great value. There is a public library with free reading and lecture rooms, adorned with memorial windows and busts of celebrated men by native artists.

The Y. M. C. A. has spacious modern buildings with fine gymnasium and swimming pool, which were donated by Philip M. Sharples, a prominent business man of the town, and the rest of the spacious building was erected through private subscription. The townspeople are proud of the two beautiful parks located at different ends of the town. One of these, Marshall Square, contains the finest arboretum to be found anywhere in this vicinity. Prof. Joseph T. Rothrock of the University of Pennsylvania, who is an eminent authority on botany, forestry and arboriculture, in one of his public lectures pronounced Marshall park, West Chester, "so far as regards the selection of its trees, the finest in North America." There are upward of 160 different species of tree, all with labels bearing their names.

The chief enterprises of the town are the manufacture of tubular cream separators and milking machines, which are shipped in large numbers to every part of the world. This factory employs in the neighborhood of 500 men.

One grower of mushrooms has picked and shipped over 100,000 pounds this year. The spawn plant for the manufacture of mushroom spawn is the only one of its kind east of the Mississippi river, and only one west of that river is known.

There are four large banks, the largest one having deposits exceeding $2,000,000. Recently a large six-story office building was erected in the vicinity of the court house, by the Farmers and Mechanics Trust Company of West Chester, and a roof garden adorns the top of this building.

WESTERN CITY TO REDUCE RATES ON ELECTRIC HEATING

At New Price Commissioner Figures Year's Bill for Five-Room House to Total $100

TACOMA, Wash.—Reduction of the municipal electrical rates to one half cent a kilowatt for heating purposes only, has been ordered by the city council on the recommendation of Commissioner Nick Lawson and Superintendent B. W. Collins and A. L. Thorn, says the Tribune. The rate will remain in effect one year and is authorized and recommended by the light and power department with the understanding that the department was not soliciting heating contracts and that those attempting heating by electricity could do so of their own accord.

In his letter to the council, Commissioner Lawson stated that under the present one cent domestic rate it would cost about $200 a year to heat a modern five room house, and that with the half cent rate, which has been ordered prepared, it will cost about $100 a year to heat the house.

Discussion of the subject drew statements from commissioners that possibly by the time the rate expired such advancement would be made in heating by electricity that it would be possible to continue the rate and make it cheaper to use electric power than other fuel.

WESTERN DEEP WATERWAY BEGUN

SEATTLE, Wash.—Residents of the Duwamish valley and of the city turned out in force recently to see the big new suction dredger, Duwamish No. 3, start work of removing 7,400,000 cubic feet of the Duwamish river, which will leave the waterway deep, straight and wide enough for the passage of ocean-going steamers as far south as the Meadows, says the Sun.

LIBRARIES AND LIBRARIANS

Brockton Meeting Interests Massachusetts Workers—
Poor Juvenile Book Sales Large in America

THE Brockton public library, where the Massachusetts Library Club is to hold its meeting tomorrow, is a new building opened only last June and made possible through the gift of $110,000 from Mr. Carnegie. The building provides two public rooms on the main floor, a reading and reference room, in addition to the librarian's office, a catalogue room and two work rooms. The basement provides a children's room and newspaper reading room. On the second floor are to be found an historical room, art room, special study room, lecture room, lecture hall, trustees' room and staff retiring room. An extension in the rear of the building is equipped with a steel stack, with accommodations for 100,000 volumes. The desk for the delivery and return of books is in the center of the building, and immediately before one on entering. The collection of books now numbers more than 60,000.

"Large book jobbers tell us that millions and millions of poor juveniles are sold in America against thousands of the sort we librarians recommend," said the superintendent of the children's department of the Brooklyn public library at the Kaaterskill convention. "I have seen," she said further, "purchase lists of boys club directors and Sunday school library committees calling for just the weak and empty stuff we would destroy. I have unwittingly been an eavesdropper at December holiday book counters and have heard the orders given by parents and the advice given by clerks. And I feel that the public library has but skirmished along the outskirts while the great field of influencing the reading of American children remains unconquered. Until we affect production to the extent that the book stores circulate as good books as the best libraries we cannot be too complacent about our position as a force in citizen making."

A question that has perplexed many librarians has been referred to New York Libraries and answered by that publication as follows:

SECTARIAN BOOKS AND THE PUBLIC LIBRARY

The people are divided here as to the wisdom or expediency of admitting books and papers on Christian Science to the public library, and we have agreed to refer the matter to you. Please give us your judgment regarding the matter. We think it entirely proper for a public library to have on its shelves books setting forth in a seemingly dignified and rational way the beliefs, doctrines and arguments representing any religious sect. But if such books are to be admitted, there should of course be no discrimination between different denominations; all should be treated alike. The library must not be a place for the propagation of any particular religious doctrine. For this reason it is usually not advisable for a very small library to purchase books representing any particular sect, because it is impossible with its small funds to represent adequately the other sects. The small library should spend its money mainly on books which represent the more or less fundamental and common ideas of the community.

If, however, the books come to the library as gifts and it is generally understood that similar gifts will be treated in the same way when other denominations or beliefs are concerned, our advice is to receive them, give them their natural place on the shelves, and have inscribed in them that they are gifts and have been donated by such and such persons or societies. Even in this case, however, do not allow much shelf space to any one denomination, and be sure that the thought and doctrines they assume to set forth.—A. W.

Citizens of Rutland, Vt., are carrying their heads high these days, and the following account taken from the Rutland Herald tells the reason why: The "Calendar Campaign" for the benefit of the Rutland free library, which was inaugurated by the members of the library association directly after the annual meeting last February, is at length concluded and the returns are now all in. The regular calendar of months and weeks, days and hours realized $482, while the "holidays," regular and irregular, brought in $618.50, making the grand total of $1100.50.

The thanks of the library directors for this splendid result are due to the special committee who have given time and energy to make the scheme a success and also to every individual who has bought a share in the calendar, whether an "hour" or a "holiday." At a recent meeting of the board it was voted to set apart the proceeds of this scheme for the nucleus of a fund for an up-to-date, well equipped library building which is surely to become one of Rutland's possessions in the not distant future.

The following "holidays" have been purchased since the list last published in the Herald:

Royal Arch day, Davenport chapter, R. A. M.
Grange day, Rutland Valley grange.
April 30th, E. E. Keyes.
A Carolina Outing, George K. Montgomery.
Twenty Silent Whist Club day.
Twenty Silent Whist Club.

National Congress of Mothers day, School Street Parent Teachers' Association.
Canada-American day, Canada-American Club.

Ladies' day, Ladies' auxiliary of the Canada-American Club.
Ann Story day, Ann Story chapter, D. A. R.

Bigger, Better, Busier Rutland day, Rutland Business Men's Association.
Rutland Masonic Lodge day, Rutland lodge, F. & A. M.
St. John's day, Killington commandery.

King Arthur's day, Knights of King Arthur of the Baptist church.
Eastern Star day, Eastern Star Phillis chapter.
Lady Macabees day, Rutland Hive Lady Macabees.

Longfellow's birthday, April 11th Longfellow School Parent-Teacher Association.

"With us in America," declares Herbert Putnam, librarian of Congress, "the reading habit is already general and avid, and the problem is no longer to create, but to direct it. I personally hope the time will come when our public libraries will revert to the recommendation of Emerson and buy no book, in any but the literature of knowledge, less than a year old. This, as a measure of expediency, to prevent misunderstanding; but also because the advertisements of publishers, the favor of the populace, the whims of critics and the contempt of scholars, steering is so difficult."

Interest in the new library of St. Louis continues to such an extent, writes Maud Van Buren in the Bulletin of New Hampshire Libraries, and so many visitors desire to be shown through the building that it has been decided to give special attention to visitors on one evening in every month. On that evening an effort is made to show the whole building to visitors, including parts of it that are not usually open to the public, such as the stock room, the catalogue and work rooms, the bindery, etc. Here is an excellent idea for even the small library, she continues. Why not, in case of a new building, attracting many visitors, make these special evenings occasions for taking your public into your confidence? The layman knows little of the "inner workings" of a library, and because of his ignorance he is likely to undervalue its importance and the work of the librarian. Here is an opportunity to explain the various processes through which a book must go before the patron gets it. The arrangement of the books on the shelves, special collections, the use of the catalogue, the reader's guide, the clipping and picture collections, and other features not on the surface might have attention called to them at this time.

POLICE CLUB MAY EQUIP GYMNASIUM

SEATTLE, Wash.—The police department athletic club will be revived this winter, says the Sun. Plans are under way for a gymnasium, to be equipped at the expense of the men, and the basement of the Grand theater is under consideration as a location. An attempt also is being made to arrange with those in charge of the army for the use of the rifle range, so that officers of the department may have an opportunity to perfect themselves in the use of firearms.

WOMAN CITY TREASURER
PORTLAND, Ore.—Roseburg's recent election, was characterized by a heavy women's vote. Agnes Pitchford, defeated Danna Howser, for city treasurer, by a vote of 558 to 475. Miss Pitchford is the first woman elected to office in Roseburg.

AUTOMOBILISTS IN TOLEDO, OHIO, ENJOY NEW CLUB

TOLEDO, O.—Formed only about two months ago, the Toledo Automobile Club of this city is rapidly growing and it is the expectation of those who started it that it will soon be among the most active and largest in the middle West.

In the month of August, the first meeting was held at the rooms of the Toledo Commerce Club. This meeting was called for the purpose of organizing the automobile club under the auspices of the Ohio State Association and to be affiliated with the American Automobile Association. There were present at that meeting C. C. Jones, president of the Ohio State Association and C. D. Savier, counsel; also T. P. Cagwin and F. H. Caley, president and secretary respectively of the Cleveland Automobile Club; also Richard H. Lee of Cleveland, a director of the same club. About 75 citizens of Toledo responded to the call and an enthusiastic meeting was held, which culminated in the organization of the club.

The officers and directors of the newly organized club are: Col. Isaac Kinsey, the president of the club and one of the

G. Thompson is the assistant secretary. He is a young man, well qualified and splendidly equipped for the work of building up this new club, which is organized as a business organization to take its part in enabling automobilists to reap the benefits of organized effort. Mr. Thompson will devote all of his time and energy to the building up of this club and to its work.

Headquarters have been established at the Boody house in this city, where Sherman Bond, the proprietor of the hotel, has fitted up rooms on the first floor in an attractive manner, where the club is supplied with literature. The club rooms are open at all hours of the day in personal charge of the assistant secretary. The club already has upwards of 150 members and the automobilists of the city are taking hold of club matters with enthusiasm. Red "Danger" signs

GOVERNOR URGES MORE SELF RULE FOR PORTO RICO

Colonel Colton, Who Has Resigned Charge of Territory, Says People Want Not Independence but Own Legislature

UNLIKE PHILIPPINES

NEW YORK—Col. George R. Colton, Governor of Porto Rico, who has resigned, to take effect Nov. 6, says the Porto Ricans want and ought to have more of self-government.

Colonel Colton went to the Spanish-American war in 1898 and arrived in the Philippines as lieutenant-colonel of the first Nebraska volunteers. He was detailed to the customs service, which he organized according to American ideas. After several years in the Philippines he was sent to Santo Domingo to organize the receivership of customs of that country. After two years and a half of this he went back to Manila as insular collector of customs and remained 18 months, preparing the new tariff for the Philippines.

"There is considerable loose talk about independence," said Governor Colton, "but as a matter of fact the Porto Rican people don't want to be separated from the United States. They realize it would reduce all values in the island. Its nearest neighbor is Santo Domingo, only a few hours' sail, with the same climate, the same natural conditions. In Santo Domingo good agricultural land can be bought for $1 to $3 an acre. In Porto Rico no agricultural land can be obtained for less than $100 to $150 an acre, and sugar land is worth $500. The land in Santo Domingo is richer, too."

"There is absolutely no similarity between conditions in the Philippines and those of Porto Rico. In Porto Rico the people ought to have a wholly elective Legislature and a greater participation in their own government."

Canal Will Boom U. S. Exports

Experts Believe Half of Trade
Now Done by Ecuador, Peru and Chile with Europe Will Be Diverted to American Markets

ACTION IS DEMANDED

WASHINGTON—What does the completion of the Panama canal mean in a business way to the exporting cities of the United States?

An analysis by state department experts, picked from the consular service to promote trade between the United States and South America, of the $125,000,000 worth of goods now being purchased from Europe by Ecuador, Peru and Chile, shows that, following the completion of the canal, about one-half of that trade should without serious difficulty be diverted to the United States. The analysis itemizes the prospective American exports as follows:

Cotton and woolen goods, $17,000,000; machinery, hardware, carriages and similar articles, $14,000,000; coal and coke, $11,000,000; explosives, $2,500,000; chemical articles, $1,200,000; paper for printing, $1,200,000; boots and shoes, $650,000; printed books, school text books, etc., $500,000; canned goods of all kinds, a large and growing market exists for this class of goods $500,000; furniture, $250,000.

It is pointed out that there is a demand in Buenos Aires, with its 1,500,000 inhabitants, for ready-made clothing for men and women. In 1911, $1,600,000 worth of all-wool ready-made clothing and $930,000 worth of cotton ready-made clothing was imported into Argentina. United States exports of ready-made clothing to Argentina have increased by nearly 400 per cent during the past year, but this nation is still selling only to the total of $500,000, where five times that sum should really be sold, with proper effort, following the completion of the canal.

In 1908 the United States exported steel rails to South America worth $1,385,412. In 1912 exports of steel rails to South America had grown to $3,883,128. These last named figures, government experts say, should be quadrupled in a single year, once the canal is in working order, and American exporters learn how to cultivate Pan-American markets. In 1911 the United States exported to Argentina structural steel worth $86,202, while in 1912 this total had grown to $326,304.

The canal will open a great field for the automobile industry. In 1908 the United States sold only 163 automobiles, valued at $194,011, in all South America. In 1912 the United States sold in the same territory 2201 automobiles, valued at $2,539,106. Experts say that, following the opening of the canal, this trade should increase at an astonishing rate. Even with the present shipping and freight disadvantages, American motor cars have displaced the French cars in Brazil and now stand second in Argentina. The United States consular agents in South America say more motor cars should be sent there. They report that there is a growing market for American motor trucks in the larger South American cities, just as at home.

In 1911 the United States sold to Brazil 615 automobiles valued at $375,521. In 1912 the number sold was 883, valued at $1,043,004. Commenting on this phase of the growth of exports, United States Minister Garrett, at Buenos Aires, in a report to the state department, says: "Yet a far greater field remains untouched. There is a great and growing market for American automobiles and motor trucks in Brazil."

The general features of what American exporters ought to do and ought not to do, to promote trade expansion, after the canal has been put in operation, are easier to grasp, say American trade experts of the state department, than the details of those features. American exporters, it is pointed out, are not strong on details of this kind, and yet they are of the greatest importance, and success is not possible without an understanding of them.

For instance, it is authoritatively pointed out that catalogs and advertising should without exception be printed in the language of the country to which they are sent. Spanish is spoken in all the Pan-American republics, excepting Haiti and a part of Brazil. In Haiti, French is the spoken language, and in a portion of Brazil it is Portuguese. It is further pointed out that all weights and measures should be expressed by the metric system, and all prices in the currency of the country to which articles are to be sent.

In this connection it is noted that the use of the American dollar sign is very confusing in catalogues intended for Pan-American trade. That sign means a variety of things in South America. In Peru it means, for example, a Peruvian sol, worth 49 cents in United States money, while in Uruguay it means the sol of that country, which is worth $1.03 of United States money. The experience of a large Chicago wholesale house is a case in point. That house sent a catalogue to South America with all prices marked in United States currency terms. Some of the South American buyers thought the quotations were intended to be in the currency of their respective countries, and much confusion resulted.

Exporters in American cities are urged by government experts to learn how to pack goods so there will be no complaints at the other end of the line. Improper packing has already cost Americans many millions of dollars in Pan-America, and helped powerfully to restrict the demands there for American goods.

Charles Lyon Chandler, of the United States consular service, gives the following advice to American exporters who are now being attracted to the Pan-American markets as never before:

"Study the wants and needs of particular countries, as well as the needs of the continent as a whole. Do not think that because you can sell automobiles in Buenos Aires, you can sell them in places where there are no roads. Above all, be patient in the export business, not merely because it pays in the long run, but because it is what the English, the Germans, the French and other European exporters are doing. We must imitate them if we are to succeed as they have done."

Representative Bulkley of Ohio, who has been paying a good deal of attention to Pan-American trade possibilities following the opening of the canal, emphasizes the necessity of teaching Spanish in the public schools of all American exporting cities, and making the study compulsory. He says that in industrial and exporting cities of Germany and France, of the class of Baltimore, Boston and Philadelphia in the east; Detroit, Chicago, Minneapolis, St. Paul, Kansas City and St. Louis, in the middle West; and San Francisco, Los Angeles and Seattle, in the far West, there would be commercial high schools, with compulsory courses of four years in Spanish for all boys over the age of 12.

A start in this direction has already been made in some American cities, but should be taken up by public school boards in all cities which hope to participate in the trade expansion which the canal is to bring about. As indicating something of what has been done to get ready in certain American cities for this trade, it is noted that Newark, N. J., has issued comprehensive export trade directory in four languages; that Boston has had a party of 50 business men in South America studying trade conditions at first hand; that Baltimore business men are preparing to make a tour of Pan-America similar to that made by Boston; that a four-year course in Spanish is now required of all pupils in the Boston High School of Commerce.

Chicago, however, has gone farthest and done most, thus far, to get hold of Pan-American trade. In 1911 the Chicago Association of Commerce founded an agency in Buenos Aires, the most important South American distributing center. This agency is operated by competent young men who speak Spanish and understand the character and temperament of the people with whom they are dealing. By the middle of the present year the Chicago agency had produced such good results that the American minister, John W. Garrett, opened an extensive and permanent exposition in Buenos Aires of Chicago-made goods.

Of necessity, Europeans are linguists, and it is probably easier for them to be so, under the compelling force of necessity, than for the people of the United States. Whether it is easy or the reverse, it is pointed out that American exporters must surround themselves with men who speak more than their own language, and that, most of all, Spanish must be spoken by the representatives of American house expecting Pan-American business. All the exporting houses of Europe doing business in South America have Spanish experts, whose principal duty it is to find out the needs of the Pan-American field, and then to cater to them. Similar processes must be adopted in the United States.

Then, too, in American public schools it is highly important that many geographies be revised so as to show Pan-America in its present condition of development. Many of these books, it is asserted, have not been revised for a generation. They give Brazil 14,000,000 population, for instance, when it is 24,000,000. Argentina is not, as some geographies state, a country filled with Indians and cowboys, nor is Peru in a "constant state of revolution and anarchy." Then, too, the city of Bahia Blanca, Argentina, which is not even on the map in numerous American school geographies, has more than 70,000 inhabitants, and has two direct steamship lines to New York. How many American school children know that Bahia Blanca is the greatest wheat shipping port in the western hemisphere, south of Lake Superior and contiguous territory?

One result of the opening of the canal, it is predicted by government experts, will be the stimulation here of general interest in Pan-America. The United States will reach a point where it knows the peoples to the south as well as those people know it, and with this increase of knowledge there is bound to come increased and reciprocal confidence and respect, and all those other traits which must precede anything truly important in the way of trade.

INDIANS TALK OF SELF HELP AND NATION SERVICE

What They Can Do for Their Country One of the Main Thoughts Voiced at Delegates' Conference in Denver

CITY FOUND CORDIAL

DENVER, Col.—More than 30 tribes were represented by the 40 or more delegates attending the third annual conference of the Society of American Indians, which has just been held in this city.

"What Can the Indian Do for Himself, for His Race, and for His Country, the United States of America?" was the central theme of this significant gathering. The delegates to the Denver conference evidently were fully awake to the needs of the American Indian, realizing the necessity of rising to a higher social plane and of acquiring as quickly as possible modern civilization and fitness for the active duties of citizenship.

Through all the speeches and utterances of the delegates ran a protest against restriction of the activities of the Indian, on account of what is regarded as the undue paternalism of the government.

Among the topics discussed and the speakers taking part were the following: "The Indian's Place in the Life of the Nation." Principal speakers: Henry Roe-Cloud, Miss Caroline W. Andrus, Dr. Carlos Montezuma. "What Indians Can Do for Themselves and for Their Country": Charles H. Keeler, John W. Oakison, Miss Elvira Pike, John C. Parish. "The Legal Condition of the Indians and Its Relation to Their Moral and Social Condition": Professor McKenzie, J. E. Shields, Oliver Lamere, Matthew K. Sniffin.

In addition to these discussions a conference was held by the delegates at Denver University, at which the following topics were discussed: First, "The Legal Rights of Indians"; second, "The Court of Claims Bills"; third, "Amendments to Existing Laws and New Laws."

A number of the Indian speakers addressed the student body. The delegates have been received in Denver with open arms. Here as everywhere the Indian attracts unusual attention. Wherever the American Indian is seen or read about interest is at once aroused. In introducing an Indian speaker at a banquet in New York city recently a distinguished citizen said: "If representatives of all the races of the globe were to congregate at a spot on Broadway, New York city, and then each man should start off in a different direction, the crowd watching would all follow the Indian."

This interest in the American Indian has been exemplified in the Denver meeting. The delegates were welcomed to the city by Governor Ammons and Mayor Perkins. A conference sermon was preached to them by Bishop F. J. McConnell of Trinity church.

One of the most enjoyable features of the occasion was an excursion planned for them by the city of Denver to the top of Lookout mountain, from which a magnificent view of the mountains and plains and the city of Denver is to be had. The view from Lookout mountain, which is reached by Funicular railway from Golden, at this season of the year is superb beyond description. It is estimated that 40,000 square miles of Colorado mountain and plain can be seen from this point. This excursion was thoroughly enjoyed by the visiting delegates.

The Indians of the new generation educated at Carlisle, Haskell and other schools, have their faces turned towards the future, not to the past, and it is said, they believe that the Indian can only work out his ideal and best interest by becoming a fully civilized and modern man. This was recognized by President Taft when he said that "Indian progress depends upon awakening the abilities of every individual Indian to the realization of personal responsibility for self and race and the duty of responding to the call to activity."

To unify this effort and to make possible better environment for the Indian in the United States as a whole, the Society of American Indians was organized at Ohio State University in April, 1911. It is governed only by persons of Indian lineage, seeks to promote the highest interest of the race through every legitimate channel; issues an official organ known as the Quarterly Journal of the Society of American Indians and maintains a Washington office where the Indian, both collectively and individually, can be looked after. The officers of the society are: Sherman Coolidge, president, Faribault, Minn.; Thomas L. Sloan, first vice-president; Charles E. Dagnett, vice-president on membership; Mrs. D. C. Kellogg, vice-president on education; Denison Wheelock, vice-president on legislation; Arthur C. Parker, secretary-treasurer, Washington, D. C.

If the Government Were to Build PIANOS

and direct the industry as the municipalities today direct the work of education, pianos would be standardized as school text books are standardized today; to accommodate the varying musical taste and the not-all-equally-full purses of the people.

Five of the pianos which we are quite sure would be chosen are sold in the Wanamaker Piano Salons; four of them being sold exclusively in these Salons, as far as New York is concerned:

CHICKERING (1823) LINDEMAN (1836)
SCHOMACKER (1838) EMERSON (1849)
and the celebrated KNABE (1837)

One player-piano—the ANGELUS—would suffice; it is so far superior to all other piano-players.

It is of great significance to people who may not know the relative merits of the several piano-players on the market that the makers of these five of the greatest pianos in America have chosen the ANGELUS as the player best fitted to be associated with their time-proven instruments.

What the Government Would Do WANAMAKER'S Is Doing

And the warranty of Wanamaker's—as unquestioned as the warranty of the Government—goes with each piano and player-piano it sells, that its equal in tone, construction and investment value is not to be found in the world.

Our Educational Plan—recognizing the universal need of music—places these instruments within the reach of every home.

Used pianos will be accepted in part exchange.

Investigators are welcomed as cordially as intending purchasers.

EAST ST. LOUIS, Ill.—Beef on the hoof soared to $9.75 a hundredweight at the national stock yards Tuesday, the highest price at this time of the year ever reported here. That price was paid for two carloads of yearling steers sold by W. R. Gilliland & Son of Wellsville, Mo. They averaged 911 pounds.

Baltimore Develops Art and Music

Steady Advance Marks History of Movements in Southern City—Classic Buildings Serve as Homes for Various Activities

NUMEROUS SCHOOLS

BALTIMORE, Md.—Artistic and musical activities of the present day in Baltimore have developed in characteristically steady, persistent, dignified fashion.

The classic building of the Peabody Institute, located on exclusive Mt. Vernon place, is the home of the Peabody Art Gallery and of the Conservatory of Music. The gallery contains a collection of casts from the antique, and a permanent exhibition of paintings. It also frequently receives individual exhibits, and among these, the paintings of Elizabeth W. Roberts of Concord, Mass., Jane Peterson of New York, and Emelie Hergenroeder of Baltimore, have taken rank.

Last season, an exhibit of unusual excellence, displaying the work of six Baltimore women artists, attracted a discriminating attendance, and the latest exhibit in October of Everett L. Watson, a promising young Baltimorean, elicited widespread comment. An exhibit of the Water Color Club will take place early in the new year, to be followed by the customary annual exhibition by American artists, under the auspices of the Charcoal Club of Baltimore.

The Rinehart School of Sculpture of the Peabody Institute holds its sessions in the Maryland Institute, and graduates of the latter may receive free tuition in sculpture. The Rinehart fund for the instruction of deserving young men, and for the development of artistic taste, provides for two competent students, scholarships of $1000 each, covering a four-years' course in Paris or Rome.

Constructive Work

Organized in 1848, the Maryland Institute for the promotion of the mechanic arts, gave its first pupils instruction only in free-hand, architectural, and mechanical drawing. Through gradual growth and development, the scope of work has broadened into a wider art education, which now includes, in day and night classes, free-hand drawing and design, illustrative art courses, general and applied design in crafts work or in interior and mural decorations, as well as architectural and sheet metal courses, modeling, and life classes. The faculty places dominant emphasis on constructive work,

JOSEPH W. PACHÉ
Director of Oratorio Society
Baltimore, Md.

and on development of individual capacity. The alert head of the department of design, Joseph W. Lauber, maintains that "art is not an exotic," but that it should be fostered and trained, through a love of the true and beautiful, in every practical activity of the world's work. To this end, the institute holds an annual exhibition of students' work, and gives, as well, frequent loan exhibits during the year.

Charcoal Club Activities

The impress of the liberal French school is manifest in Baltimore in the Charcoal Club. This institution, organized in 1883, consists of artists and contributing members; it neither binds its students to a fixed curriculum, nor prescribes their individual work. Its school of fine arts, for 17 years under the well-known ideal instruction of Edwin S. Whiteman, has day and night classes and includes comprehensive courses in life, portrait, antique and still-life. At the Monday night sketch class, not only art students, but artists of note gather; a summer sketch class affords ample opportunity for nature study. The club holds frequent exhibitions of paintings and art objects, both at its rooms and in the Peabody gallery.

Within a stone's throw of the Peabody stands the massive building, fittingly Egyptian in architecture, that houses the superb collection known as the Walters' art gallery; its almost grim aspect comforts with the veritable "king's treasures" carefully guarded night and day within its walls. Among these there are many originals by the Dutch, Flemish and Italian masters, as well as a collection of modern paintings—the original nucleus of the gallery—which manifests in its selection the finished taste of the connoisseur. There are also originals and copies of antique sculpture, many rare tapestries, and a wealth of oriental curios. At present, however, the public must wait patiently for further revelations of the wonderful beauty of the interior of the building and of its exquisite gems of art.

In the famous open squares that form Mt. Vernon place, stand the bronze Barye replicas, presented to the city about 25 years ago by William T. Walters, the founder of the art gallery. They include the heroic Louvre lion, and four groups: War, Peace, Order and Force.

Conservatory of Music

Returning to the Peabody Institute, one enters the enlarged quarters of the conservatory of music, now in the forty-sixth year of its splendid service to the city. The endowment of the institute by George Peabody, although inadequate to its needs, nevertheless enables the conservatory to maintain strict standards of musical integrity. There were 1237 students enrolled in 1912. The members of the faculty, with the exception of the director himself, are natives of other countries. Harold Randolph, a Virginian by birth, received his musical education at the conservatory that he now directs with fine professional intelligence and keen insight into the musical needs of Baltimore. When in 1898 Mr. Randolph succeeded Asger Hamerik, the well-known composer and conductor, he organized the preparatory department, which has developed into a feature of strength.

A unique feature of the conservatory's work—in fact, one of the most highly artistic series of the year—consists of 20 artists' recitals, given on Friday afternoons by the world's best artists. The programs comprise the most refined type of solo and chamber music.

The noble hall in which these recitals take place, is noteworthy for its decorative sculptures; two large panels in high relief, one on each side of the stage, symbolize respectively Music and Literature. These panels represent, by the way, the work of two Baltimore sculptors, Hans Schuler and E. Maxwell Miller, both graduates of the Rinehart school.

An important adjunct of the conservatory work is its concert and publicity bureau, directed by Frederic E. Huber, which manages all outside concerts given by the artists on the faculty, and, as part of the "musical extension" work, arranges for concerts in the small towns of Maryland and neighboring states.

A recent addition to the conservatory's usefulness, the summer school, extends its session six weeks from July 1, and offers, in conjunction with the summer school of the Johns Hopkins University, exceptional advantages in lectures and recitals given by prominent educators, musicians, and artists from every section of the country.

Among visiting organizations of national repute are the Chicago and Metropolitan Grand Opera Companies; the Boston Symphony orchestra, gives five concerts annually. Last spring, the music festival, given under the auspices of the Oratorio Society, included the work of the United German Societies, the Woman's Philharmonic chorus, the Philadelphia orchestra, and soloists.

Oratorio Society

The Oratorio Society, organized in 1881, numbers 400. In the words of its director, Joseph W. Paché, "It is a truly democratic organization." During the 19 years of his able leadership, Mr. Paché has welded this heterogeneous mass into a trained body of singers, capable of rendering such works as Handel's "Messiah" and "Israel in Egypt," Liszt's "Dante," and Saint Saens' "Samson and Delilah." Mr. Paché takes to his big chorus genuine artistic enthusiasm, and imbues it with the strength and beauty of his own lofty ideals.

In February, 1911, a notable performance of Beethoven's "Ninth Symphony," marked the common thirtieth anniversary in Baltimore of the Oratorio Society and the Boston symphony orchestra.

During the season of 1913-14, two interesting new works will be brought out. The "Fiftieth Psalm," written by Saint Saens especially for Mr. Paché, with double chorus, orchestra, organ and harp, will be given in conjunction with Verdi's "Requiem," the latter to commemorate Verdi's one hundredth anniversary. Last year, Mr. Paché secured from Felix Nowowiejski the right to the first performance in this country of the latter's new work, "Kreuzauf-finding," the translation of which may be crystallized into "The Revelation of the Cross." Its performance in Baltimore in April probably will be the initial one.

Philharmonic Chorus

Baltimore's youngest musical organization, the Woman's Philharmonic Chorus, founded by Mr. Paché four years ago, consists of 60 solo voices; the numbers rendered are novelties of real artistic worth that can probably be heard in few, if any, other places in this country. The soloists, all of the highest type, include Mrs. Charles Morton, a noted Baltimore soprano, Alexander Heinemann and solo artists from the Boston orchestra.

Though debtor indeed to its established organizations, Baltimore owes no little to its artist-teachers and musicians of broad intelligence and real culture, who, laboring individually through years to uphold true standards of excellence, have contributed largely to the artistic progress of the community.

TAX ON UNEARNED LAND INCREMENT IS ALBERTA PLAN

MOOSE JAW, Sask.—A dispatch from Edmonton says that Premier Sifton has given notice to the Provincial Parliament of Alberta, that he will move a resolution to tax the unearned increment in land. This is thought to be the first move of its kind in any province in Canada, though a number of them have the single or land tax. The Alberta idea is a tax to be levied when the sale of a piece of property is reported, to be a percentage of the increase since the last recorded sale. In this it differs from British proposals for an annual tax.

In Saskatchewan there is a small tax of this nature, though its purpose is quite different, and its effect on land values not appreciated. This is the levy of "assurance fees" by the government whenever a Torrens title is registered. These fees go to make up a fund which is used whenever a mistake in a land titles office causes damage, and has nothing to do with the idea of preventing speculation.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

LOS ANGELES EXPRESS—Postmaster-General Burleson is entirely correct in the belief he is said to entertain that postmasters in cities ought to be selected for business ability rather than political service. With the remarkable expansion of business transacted through the postoffices, due in large measure to the increasing popularity and extension of the parcel post, there is every reason for such a reform in the system as will place the postoffices in charge of men of conspicuous integrity and sound business intelligence rather than parcel them out to local politicians in recognition of party service or personal popularity. The parcel post and the postal savings feature are making the postoffice a business institution to be run on strictly business principles.

DENVER REPUBLICAN—One of the gratifying developments in the relations between the public and large corporations is the growth of a better understanding between the two. Time was—and not many years since—when the people looked upon these large business concerns with distrust and suspicion. They were held to be inimical to the general interest, lawless in their nature, and wholly without any saving human impulse of fair play and kindness. The corporation on its side reciprocated the lack of cordiality. Its attitude in the main was that the people had no concern with its private affairs and that the secrecy of these had to be guarded against investigation. The past few years have very largely wiped out this animosity. A corporation is a business concern. It exists to sell goods of one nature or another, whether those goods are household supplies, water, gas, transportation or steel rails. To do this successfully it is necessary that a cordial relationship shall be maintained with its patrons. Most large concerns will now go a long way to explain their attitude to the customers who patronize them. Publicity men are kept to inform the public of matters which need explanation. Complaints are attended to rigidly, so much so that in many cases companies will make concessions even when in the right to hold the good will of a dissatisfied consumer of its goods. During the nineties, while the American corporation was a new economic phase, there was a good deal of mismanagement at the expense of the public. Stock was watered far beyond reason. Unjust and arbitrary rules were enforced. The law of the survival of the fittest wrought much hardship upon smaller individual business concerns. But these things have been largely eliminated. It is recognized by all that the corporation is a necessary factor of twentieth century life. Both the public and the management of these interests are coming to a sane and rational understanding of the situation that makes for a common respect of each other.

CHICAGO RECORD-HERALD—The five native members of the Philippine upper council, or Senate, have been selected. They are strong, able and representative men. A fine opportunity and a great responsibility confront them. The government of the entire archipelago is to be "native," not alien, the American members of the commission constituting a minority. The fact that the remarkable experiment is possible at this time should make Americans proud and glad. A few silly criticisms were made by superficial "patriots" when the administration's decision was first announced, but it has since been "discovered" that there is no departure in the plan from the policies professed by the McKinley, Roosevelt and Taft administrations. Another step toward self-government has been taken, and it is moreover, a step which can be retraced if the experiment should fail. At any time the complexion of the majority of the commission can be changed again by new appointments. A native government conscious of its responsibility should render it unnecessary for the secretary of war or for Congress to exercise the power of vetoing Philippine legislation. The existence of the power should be sufficient to insure care and moderation. The friends of freedom and home rule will hope for the complete success of the simple yet statesmanlike Wilson plan.

NEW LOS ANGELES STATION TO REPLACE OLD ARCADE DEPOT

LOS ANGELES, Cal.—The Southern Pacific Company has filed with the railroad commission plans and specifications for its proposed new passenger station here. The company asks that the commission give its approval to the construction of the new station in accordance with the plans submitted.

The building to be erected will be partly on the site of the present Arcade depot and partly on unoccupied grounds. It will face on the west on Central avenue, Ceres street and Fifth street and main subway entrance, underneath the passenger tracks, from Alameda street on the east.

The structure will consist of a main central building and two wings. The central portion will be three stories in height but wings two stories. The central feature is a big waiting-room 40 feet high and of class A construction. The station building proper will be 110x600 feet and the depot and yard will cover an area of 15 acres, says the Tribune.

The yard will contain 14 tracks, each track capable of holding a maximum train of 15 passenger cars and two engines. Entrance to all trains will be by means of a subway running under the main passenger yard. This exit opens into a room 50x70 feet known as the "public concourse."

The main waiting-room will be 80x210 feet, and so constructed that people leaving trains are separated from those taking trains. There will be nine ticket windows and four main entrances, each entrance to be 17½ feet wide with five swinging doors in each one of these openings. The lighting in the waiting-room will be of the "indirect" type.

Mezzanine floors in each end of the concourse will be 30x75 feet and contain lounging and reading spaces. It will be possible to overlook from these mezzanine floors the traffic in the main concourse.

Provision is made for an automobile drive under the marquis, 220 feet long and 30 feet wide.

RATIONAL GOLF

By STEVEN ARMSTRONG

Here is the balance of Miss M. Wilson's letter to "Fourteen Handicap" in Ladies Golf re half handicaps: Several cases of half handicaps have come under my notice and I remember only one which caused any special comment. The player considered the committee had treated her very unfairly in putting her on half after winning several prizes in the club. She was playing well and above her handicap. Much argument on the point left the committee still confident they had done right. Next day their action was amply justified and confirmed, as she reduced her handicap by four strokes playing in a competition at another club.

In another case the committee put a player on half, thinking she was also too high, but she displayed a very different attitude. She returned 10 cards without reducing her handicap, and in consequence the committee then thought she must be right, so gave her the full one once more. In several other cases the action of the committees has been thoroughly justified, as in almost every case it has resulted in a satisfactory reduction.

Take the case of a player who will not take the trouble and interest to put in enough scores to obtain a correct handicap which will enable her to meet the others on an equal footing. She is not at all a keen golfer, plays very seldom, and when she does, in a very casual way, until one day she suddenly thinks she will go and play for some special prize that is being offered at the club. Then it is that she plays more carefully and thoughtfully and shows by her card that she is capable of doing a better score than when playing in an "anyhow" frame of mind. Should she be allowed to come along and play on a full handicap and play against all the regular players on these terms?

Again, take the case of a player who has joined an L. G. U. club mostly for the reason of getting an L. G. U. handicap. She plays regularly on a home course that is not affiliated to the Union,

UNSATISFIED WIRES TO BE REMOVED

LEXINGTON, Mass.—The big feed wires and other large cables that for years have been strung along the edge of the battle green and in front of the statue of Capt. John Parker that surmounts the Hayes memorial fountain, spoiling the beauty of the otherwise rural scene, are soon to be removed by the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company.

SHOTS FROM HAWAIIAN GUNS TRACED FROM DIAMOND HEAD

Diamond Head, Oahu, from the sea

HONOLULU, Hawaii—One of the points of interest in the maneuvers of the garrison army of the island of Oahu, which are being held this month, is Diamond Head, a mountain on the summit of which is located a masked peep hole through which the course of the shots fired from the batteries of the defense and the ships of the theoretical enemy in the harbor is noted. Diamond Head is one of the beauty spots of the island. On the beach near the mountain are located many cottages which are owned by persons who live in Honolulu.

SHIPPING NEWS

Sailings are to be resumed between Powey, England and Boston, after a cessation of several months, it was learned today. The labor difficulties which have tied up all work along the Powey docks for some time have been settled and work is now being resumed. The steamer Crown Point is to lead china clay for Boston and will be due here early in November, it is said. She comes to the Furness-Withy Company, who import about 40,000 tons of china clay annually. Many New York liners are to be loaded as soon as possible.

Pollock Rip blue bell buoy is turned bottom up, according to Captain Colberth of the steamer H. M. Whitney, which arrived here this noon from New York. He said that a passing tow of barges found the channel marker in that condition. Captain Colberth also said that the schooner Jacob M. Haskell, Captain Cook, coming to Boston from Tampa, Fla., was sighted off Cape Race at 8:30 this morning, beating her way across the bay.

Conditions were easier at T wharf today with the demand for fresh groundfish slightly lighter and prices lower. Nine vessels brought in catches, the new steamer trawler Wave being high liner. Arrivals: Steamer Wave 38,100 pounds, schooners Valerius 25,000, Gladys and Nellie 25,000, Evelyn M. Thompson 20,400, Russell 21,300, Emily Sears 16,100, Arthur 3000, Laura Enos 2500, Klondike 2000. The Wave also had 2000 pounds scrod and the Russell 1000 cusk. Dealers quoted prices per hundredweight as follows: Steak cod $14.25, market cod $7.75, had-dock $7, pollock $0.75, large hake $6.75, medium hake $3.75, and cusk $5.50.

To enter the Mediterranean passenger service out of New York for the coming winter months, the Hamburg-American liner Cincinnati sails for the metropolis this afternoon. The steamer Hamburg, which will take the place of the Cincinnati, is expected here from New York Saturday, and will make her first sailing Tuesday. A cargo which includes 10,000 barrels of apples awaits the Hamburg.

Only one vessel was reported at Gloucester today outside of the trollers which landed 50 barrels herring. The lone arrival was the schooner Mystery, with 12,000 pounds fresh halibut and 15,000 pounds fresh fish.

Off to assist the barge F. S. Hampshire into port, the tug Neponset left here today. The barge, bound from Newport News to Boston with 1500 tons of coal, was reported today anchored off Cross Rip lightship, Vineyard sound, with her rudder gone. The coal is consigned to the Boston Lighter Company.

On her second attempt to leave port, the schooner Ralph M. Hayward, Captain French, left the lower harbor today bound for Hillsboro, N. B. On Oct. 8, the vessel sailed with a fair wind. About 175 miles outside she encountered adverse conditions and was driven back to the lower harbor, where she has since been awaiting an opportunity to resume her passage.

MALDEN SEEKS SUPERINTENDENT

How Will the Income Tax Affect You?

MR. SCHWAB'S VIEWS ARE NOT SO OPTIMISTIC

Returning From Abroad, He Says Industrial Depression Pre- vails in Europe and Is Under Way Also in America

NO CONTRACTS MADE

NEW YORK—Charles M. Schwab, who has returned from Europe, says: There is no truth in published statement that my mission to Europe was to raise money to build a fleet of ships, or that I was going to float a line for that or any other purpose. My business was to contract for ships and machinery for use in connection with our Chilean ore, but I have returned without making any

"I found the industrial depression which is under way here prevalent in Europe also, and I arrived at the conclusion that I could make better contracts later, as I believe prices will be lower.

"I have had no reason to change my views as to industrial conditions generally since I went away. Business is very poor, not only here but in European countries also, and instead of having my views changed, I look for still further recession.

"It is not surprising, considering general conditions everywhere, that steel prices are declining. I do not mean to say that business is at a standstill. We are busy at the Bethlehem plant, and so are all other steel works; but the orders are not coming, and prices are declining.

"I understand the Steel corporation is operating about 83 per cent of its pig iron capacity, and while there is, as yet, no heavy decline in production, the scarcity of orders indicates that there will be a heavy falling off in the near future. Industrial conditions in Germany also are depressed, perhaps not quite as much as reported."

Mr. Schwab said that, even if Bethlehem Steel Company does enter upon a period of depression, along with other industries, he does not see any reason why dividends on the preferred stock should not be continued, "although," he said, "that is a matter on which I cannot speak with authority, as the question remains with directors; but at present I do not believe the dividend will either be discontinued or cut."

Asked about a report that an early combination of Bethlehem Steel Company, Pennsylvania and Cambria Steel companies would be made, Mr. Schwab said: "There is no truth in that report. I have no such combination in view, nor have any overtures been made to me along those lines."

FINAL PAYMENT FOR CANADIAN PACIFIC STOCK

With payment of the fifth and final instalment of $35 per share on the 280,000,000 Canadian Pacific stock which was offered to shareholders last February at $175, the company will have $280,000,000 common stock outstanding. This will, of course, share in dividends for the quarter ended Dec. 31.

The new stock will increase Canadian's dividend requirements by $6,000,000 per annum. On the basis of earnings of the last fiscal year the road would have shown 15.04 per cent on the common stock against the share balance of 19.56 per cent earned for the $200,000,000 common then outstanding.

There has been pronounced weakness

Canadian Pacific stock of late, and it is rumored that the bulk of the selling has emanated from London and Montreal. At current levels it shows a loss of nearly 43 points from the high point of last year, 266½. It is still, however, more than 15 points above the low price of the year, reached in July. Even while paying 10 per cent the stock is selling to return only 4.46 per cent on the investment. This is in striking contrast to many of the standard American railroad stocks which are selling on a 6 per cent to 7 per cent basis.

INDIA'S HEAVY SILVER PURCHASES

LONDON—The government of India has lately been a heavy buyer of silver to meet the strong demand for money in that country. Its purchases in London from the last week in September to the middle of present month totaled about $5,000,000.

RECEIVERS WISH CERTIFICATES TO BE ISSUED

ST. PAUL — Friaco receivers asked Judge Sanborn to authorize them to issue $10,500,000 receivers' certificates to pay preferential claims and car trust obligations. Frank B. Kellogg, representing Carter, Ledyard & Millburn of New York, objected. Judge Sanborn granted a delay until Monday for filing of official objection, and will request a report as to effect of issuance of these certificates.

It was reported at the hearing that the a tificates will not materially affect r holders of the $28,000,000 of Texas South-rn road, but that the money raised will be used to pay all first lien claims and preferred claims against Frisco. An order for payment of $78,000 interest on general holdings of Frisco will probably be signed at the same time.

The receivers stated that income of the roads now is ample to pay all running expenses, with special appropriation.
The purchase of supplies will be carried on without special order of court.

Position of These Securities Strengthened by Reduction of Dividend Rate — Maintenance Expenditures Have Been Heavier Under New Management

matter of great importance whether or not the physical condition of the property is kept in first class condition.

Thanks to the new management Chesapeake & Ohio is only just beginning to take its place as a through road from the Atlantic coast to the Great lakes. The new mileage recently acquired extends the system through Columbus, O., to Toledo and from Cincinnati west to Chicago. Over two thirds of the company's total tonnage is made up of bituminous coal, the same as Norfolk & Western, and if Chesapeake & Ohio is to overtake that company it must keep its roadbed and equipment up to the highest standards. A soft coal road that does not develop its operating efficiency to the highest possible degree cannot hope

In his remarks to shareholders Presiding Director Stevens explains that during the fiscal year just closed, unprecedented floods occurred in the Jameson river and Ohio valley, the ill effects of which are still being felt. He also points out that during the year there were severe and prolonged strikes by the coal miners in West Virginia, which materially reduced the output of the mines affected. Despite those misfortunes Chesapeake & Ohio managed to increase its gross earnings by $795,408 compared with 1912. There was an increase of from 66 to 69.7 per cent, however, in the operation ratio which resulted in an increase of $1,020,000 in expenses and at the close of the year the directors decided to reduce the annual dividend rate from 5 to 4 per cent.

To make money. Chesapeake & Ohio's directors know that and that is why they reduced the dividend and increased the maintenance appropriations to the highest point on record.

That the policy which has been adopted by the new management pays, is evident from the way the company's business has developed. In 1903 traffic density stood at 1,606,000 and bituminous coal made up 54.5 per cent of the total traffic. Last year, because of the increased facilities for handling business, the coal traffic amounted to 75 per cent of the total freight movement and the traffic density, that is the number of tons of freight hauled one mile per mile of road operated, was 2,886,000, an increase of nearly 80 per cent over 1903.

TROLLEY EARNINGS DURING OCTOBER

With October marred by nearly three weeks of consecutive clouds and rain it would be natural to assume that the trolley companies would show this month a serious decline in gross earnings. Strange as it may appear this is not the case. For illustration: gross receipts of Massachusetts Electric for the first 18 or 20 days of this month show a comparative decline of only a trifle over 1 per cent. Boston Elevated is equally well off. In fact Elevated's gross income for the first 20 days of this month has broken practically even with last year and that despite the fact that October a year ago was a record month with total passenger income for the month of $1,500,000.

The manner in which street railway traffic has held up so far this month is doubtless accounted for in part by the fact that the temperature has been high and also because by October pleasure riding and particularly holiday traffic is ended. Had this month to compare with high peak holiday earnings in October, 1912, the slump in gross would have been very material.

BOMBAY, India.—Bombay Stock Exchange was closed today, because of demoralized financial conditions in India, as result of failure of the Credit Bank of India on Oct. 3.

Absence of several of India's most influential financiers who are now in England was also a factor in situation.

FOOTBALL TITLE OF MIDDLE WEST VERY DOUBTFUL

Purdue Meets Chicago Saturday in Important Contest of Week for Conference Championship Which Wisconsin Now Holds

ILLINOIS STILL IN

CHICAGO—That this year's battle for the football championship of the Western Conference is going to be one of the best noted in the middle West in some years is the opinion of those who have followed the work of the "Big Nine" in their practice and games to date.

Last fall it early became evident that the University of Wisconsin was going to capture the title and the Badgers have started out this fall with a splendid lot of candidates; but that they will not be able to take the title again this year without a much harder struggle than last fall is already apparent. In fact the time game played with Purdue last Saturday may result in their elimination from the honors or in placing them in a tie with some other college.

This week will find Chicago playing Purdue in what is expected to be a very important match. Chicago has won both of her games to date, having defeated Indiana and Iowa in turn. Purdue has won two of her games and tied in the other, so that unless this week's game results in a tie one of these two teams will be eliminated from the title. Coach Stagg has a very good eleven representing the Maroon this fall and is expected to put up a great battle.

That Purdue tied Wisconsin was not much of a surprise to those who have followed the team this fall, although outsiders had not looked for it. The Purdue team this fall is much stronger than that of 1912 and really has championship promise. Victory over Chicago at the week end will make the team a big favorite for the honors.

Illinois will meet Indiana in the other big western conference game of the week and should win easily. Illinois has scored 82 points to 7 in the three games played and Coach Zuppke is developing a very strong scoring eleven. Indiana lost to Chicago in her only conference game to date and does not appear to be in the same class with the best of the teams.

Minnesota and Iowa will also meet in a conference game Saturday and the result of this match is much in doubt. Minnesota has always been well up in the conference standing, but the defeat Saturday at the hands of Nebraska seems to indicate that Coach Williams has not developed his usually strong team this fall. Iowa has already lost a conference game to Chicago by a score of 23 to 6, and is not expected to finish very high in the standing.

While not in the conference the University of Michigan record is closely watched in the middle West. That the team will soon be back in the league is confidently predicted by those closely associated with western college athletic circles. Coach Yost will have another battle on his hands when his Ann Arbor eleven faces Vanderbilt Saturday. This will be the first real good chance for comparing the South with the West.

That Michigan is not up to her usual standard or as strong as early predictions would seem to indicate, was proven Saturday when the Michigan Agricultural College team defeated them for the first time in the history of the game. Coach Yost appears to have a fairly good line, but his backfield has little scoring ability when facing a strong opponent. Vanderbilt is putting up a pretty strong game this fall and should force the Wolverines to the limit.

CHARLESTON LOSES PENNANT

HUNTINGTON, W. Va.—Failure to comply with the laws of baseball cost Charleston, W. Va., the championship of the Ohio State league for the 1913 season. The directors of the league at a meeting here Tuesday refused to allow the Charleston team two seven-inning games won from the Maysville, Ky., team on Sept. 21.

With these games thrown out the percentage of the team dropped to .626, three points below that held by the Chillicothe, O., team, to which the directors awarded the 1913 pennant. President R. R. Pennywitt of the Charleston club announced that he would not appeal the case. He contended that the umpire limited the games to seven innings.

GEER IS CROSS COUNTRY CAPTAIN

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass.—Joseph W. Geer, 1914, of New York city, has been elected captain of the Williams cross country team for the coming season. He is one of the best long distance runners in college and has been a member of the varsity track team for two years.

MORE COACHES AT BROWN

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—Candidates for the Brown varsity football team are to be given strenuous work this afternoon. Sprackling and Smith, two former Brown stars, have joined the coaching staff, and should help materially in the development of the eleven.

MORE SCRIMMAGE FOR HARVARD MEN THIS AFTERNOON

Only Two Days Left in Which to Fit Crimson Eleven for Big Game With Penn State Team

More hard scrimmage practice is planned for the Harvard varsity football team this afternoon. There are now only two days left in which to put the candidates through scrimmaging in preparation for the game with Penn State Saturday and the coaches are going to give the players some of the hardest work they have had on Soldiers field this fall.

The varsity had its goal line crossed by the second team for the first time this year in the practice held Tuesday. The second team also scored a goal from the field which, added to the touchdowns, netted them 9 points. The varsity were not defeated, however, as they scored 15 points, two touchdowns and a field goal. The second team showed more strength than in any of the previous scrimmages and gave the first team a hard battle.

The first part of the afternoon was devoted to individual work, and in the perfecting of the new plays and formations. Later a dummy scrimmage was held, which lasted nearly a half-hour. This was followed by an hour of scrimmaging against the second eleven.

Captain Storer, Hitchcock, Hardwick, Pennock and Trumbull watched the scrimmage from the sidelines. Brickley was in the scrimmage for the first time since the Williams game, and he added much strength to the attack. Freedley ran the first team and was relieved by Logan later.

Chances of Storer being shifted from tackle to end now look good. Yesterday he played end on the varsity during dummy scrimmage. First class ends are scarce. Storer is very fast in getting down the field under kicks, even from tackle position. His tackle play would aid him greatly on the offensive. If this shift is made Hitchcock and Gilman will be the tackles.

D. P. Morgan, Jr., '16, who played tackle on the 1916 freshman team last fall, joined the squad Tuesday. He weighs 176 and is in good condition. Tackle material is scarce and he should add strength to this department.

SIDELINE NOTES

Dartmouth appears to have a fine chance of winning from Princeton Saturday.

The four Maine eleven starts in on their state championship series Saturday. They appear to be very evenly matched.

That backfield at Harvard of Mahan, Hardwick and Brickley looks to football much as the infield of Melnis, Collins, Baker and Barry looks to baseball.

Captain Storer of Harvard is one of the surest kickers of goals from touchdowns on the gridiron this year. He seldom misses one no matter how hard the angle.

Tufts will have a chance to take a high ranking in football this fall in the game with West Point Saturday. A victory over the soldiers would count for much.

Were it not for the fact that Harvard has two such exceptionally fine tackles as Storer and Hitchcock this fall, Gilman of last year's freshman eleven would surely win a place on the Crimson varsity.

Wisconsin undergraduates are trying to interest western sentiment in having the western conference play the eastern champion for the football championship of the United States.

Harvard will hold its first football mass-meeting of the year in the Union this evening. Songs and cheers for the Princeton game will be rehearsed and Lothrop Withington, a former captain, will speak.

It is interesting to note that the Nebraska team which defeated Minnesota Saturday in one of the big upsets of western football has been partly coached by Sam White, the famous Princeton end who scored the touchdowns that defeated Harvard and Yale in 1911.

This year's Carlisle eleven is peculiar to the school in several ways. It is the first time there has not been some famous star on it. It also has a light line which changes faster than any other Carlisle team has done. Its chief weakness is in furnishing interference for the runner.

PRESIDENT SAYS RULES TOO STRICT

PHILADELPHIA—Declaring that the line drawn between the amateur and the professional athlete was too fine, Gustavus T. Kirby, president of the A. A. U., has gone on record in favor of matches between the two classes.

In an address to the Philadelphia Alumni Club last night he said that under certain circumstances professional-amateur contests would help athletics generally in this country. President Kirby also urged control of athletics in the United States by a strong central body.

DARTMOUTH WILL HAVE HARD WORK IN SECRET DRILL

Only Two More Afternoons on Home Gridiron Previous to Leaving Friday for Princeton

HANOVER, N. H.—Coach Cavanaugh has a hard afternoon's work mapped out for the candidates for the Dartmouth varsity football team today in secret on the local gridiron. There are now only two days left in which to prepare for the big game with Princeton Saturday, as the players will leave Friday morning, and the coach is anxious to give the men as much hard work as possible.

The fact that several of the best players are not in shape to play Saturday is making it necessary to drive the other players more than would ordinarily be the case as the team play has been set back materially and needs much attention if it is to show up well against the Orange and Black.

Snow, Dartmouth's best line plunger and tackle, will not be in condition to play against Princeton on Saturday. Reports to this effect were definitely given out this evening. The loss of Snow means a lot to the Green, for as a defensive player he is unexcelled, and in this department he will be greatly needed.

In order to develop a second-string backfield, Coach Cavanaugh tried out Winslip at left half. This is Winslip's first time in the backfield, his regular place being at end, but he shows signs of developing into a good man, since he has speed and weighs over 160.

An hour was spent in a dummy defense against the plays of the Princeton team. Then the varsity took on the freshmen for two 15-minute periods of hard scrimmage, in which the varsity scored once. As the practice was chiefly one to establish a firmer defense, the freshman team was given the ball.

The Green's defensive power is rapidly increasing was shown in this afternoon's work when the former held the 1917 eleven to no score and even on the 10-yard line resisted the onslaught of Thielcher, Du Hamel and Gerrish. The only score was made by Curtis, when he intercepted a forward pass from Switzer to Trier and went 75 yards for a touchdown.

Fundamentals of the game are a strong point with the Dartmouth coaches and this afternoon the squad was given a thorough drill in the rudimentary elements of the game. Starting first with a forward passing drill, the men went right through the whole year's work, including grass drill, tackling the dummy, race drill and signal practice.

PICKUPS

It is stated in St. Louis that President Hedges of the American league team in that city has signed Manager Rickney to a 10-year contract.

Crawford, the hard-hitting outfielder of the Detroit Americans, is playing in the outfield for the Chicago Americans in their world's tour with the Giants.

Dean Briggs of Harvard says that after witnessing 46 years of baseball at Harvard he believes last year's series with Yale was the best he has ever seen.

Manager Chance has released no less than 16 of the players who went to Bermuda last spring for preliminary training for places on the New York Americans.

Arthur Shafer, the utility infielder and outfielder of the New York Giants, is going to help Coach Waddell train the San Diego (Cal.) Army and Navy Academy football team.

Of the 13 players who represented Harvard in the series with Yale last summer, Felton, Tomes and Alsop were the only ones not present at the undergraduate celebration Monday night.

Hardly an all-American baseball team was selected this fall that did not contain the names of Walter Johnson of Washington as a pitcher and E. W. Collins of the Athletics as second baseman.

James Thorpe, the famous Carlisle Indian athlete who is a regular member of the New York Giants on its world's tour, is doing some heavy batting for his team, and it will surprise few to find him a regular outfielder on the team in next year's National league championship race.

GIANTS GET KONECHY
NEW YORK—It is stated here on the authority of a St. Louis player that Konechy, first baseman of the St. Louis Nationals, has been traded to the New York Giants, and all that remains is for the deal to be announced.

HARD WORK AT PENN STATE
STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—A hard afternoon's work is mapped out for the Penn State football candidates. It will be the next to the last practice on the local gridiron in preparation for the game with Harvard. The coaches are now busy teaching the men some new plays.

PLAY TODAY AT LINCOLN
LINCOLN, Neb.—The New York Giants and the Chicago Americans play an exhibition game here this afternoon on their world's tour. The Chicago team won its first victory of the trip at Peoria Tuesday, defeating the Giants 6 to 4.

VETERAN GOLF PLAYERS ENJOY ANNUAL TOURNEY

George Wright, Famous Boston Player, Again Acts as Host on Links of Wollaston Golf Club

MONTCLAIR, Mass.—Veteran golfers of this section of the country are today enjoying their annual fall outing and tournament at the Wollaston Golf Club. George Wright, the famous Boston baseball player of some 25 years ago, is again acting as host, and today's event promises to come up to those of former years.

Up to noon no less than 48 players had started out on their 18-hole handicap medal play round. Conditions were very good and some low scores were expected.

The leading player among those who started out early was F. H. Hoyt of the Woodland Golf Club. Some of the most prominent of the veterans starting were W. M. Smith, Brae-Burn; Francis Peabody, Country Club; D. T. Kidder, Country Club; G. A. Sawyer, Oakland; A. J. Wellington, Woodland; John Shepard, Jr., Rhode Island; H. L. Ayer, Brae-Burn, and A. H. Latham, Country Club.

The first pair to get away was Francis Peabody and F. E. Russell, and they teed off at 8:30.

George Wright started out about 12:30 paired with Joseph A. Campbell of the Wollaston club.

The best of the scores turned in up to 3 o'clock was that made by F. H. Hoyt of Woodland. Mr. Hoyt had a splendid 76 for the 18 holes, taking 41 on the outward journey and coming home in 35 as follows:

WILLIAMS WINS HARVARD TENNIS

R. N. Williams, Jr., '16, Philadelphia, won the Harvard College singles tennis championship Tuesday by defeating J. J. Armstrong '14 in straight sets on Jarvis field. The score was 6-4, 6-4, 6-1.

The courts were not in the best of condition, but the playing was fast and exciting. Williams depended upon his service and on placing the ball. Armstrong played a fast game, but was not nearly so sure as his opponent. His best play was good, and he covered the court in fine style. Both men are well known in the tennis world. Williams was a member of the Davis cup team last summer, and Armstrong won the championship of the Northwest at Deep Haven, Minn. The score by points:

YALE ELEVEN IS STILL WORKING ON THE OFFENSE

Chief Aim of Head Coach Jones Is to Get More Power Into Eleven for Game Saturday

NEW HAVEN, Conn.—Head Coach Howard Jones plans to devote most of this afternoon to building up the offensive powers of the Yale varsity football eleven in preparation for a hard game with Washington and Jefferson Saturday. There has been so much shifting in the Yale backfield that the men have not yet reached a very high stage of offensive play. The line is doing fairly well individually, but as far as cooperation is concerned the whole eleven is badly in need of training.

The team had the hardest scrimmage of the year at Yale field Tuesday afternoon, in which the varsity scored four touchdowns on the freshmen. Pumpelly, the drop kicker, got into play for the first time in weeks, playing fullback on the varsity. Captain Ketcham watched the play from the sidelines, Way taking his place. Thompson ran the varsity at quarter, Cornish being given a rest.

Head Coach Jones gave blackboard instruction to the squad for two hours in the gymnasium in the evening.

It was learned that Brann, who was tried at end last Saturday, will not get into the game next Saturday. Conney and Wiser are the only other players who will be out of the lineup this week.

BOSTON A. A. MAY HOLD SCHOOLBOY CROSS-COUNTRY

That the Boston Athletic Association will hold a cross-country race this fall open to schoolboy runners of New England is today predicted by those close to the athletic affairs of the union club. George B. Billings is chairman of the athletic committee of the club and is giving the matter considerable thought.

The B. A. A. has never held such an event, but an invitation has been received from the Cornell University athletic authorities stating that the Ithaca university will pay the expenses of the winner of such a contest to the Cornell intercollegiate championship in November.

Should the B. A. A. hold the race it will take place the first week in November. There are a number of very fast schoolboy cross-country runners in New England and it is hoped that arrangements can be completed whereby the best one can represent this section of the country in the championship event at Ithaca.

ROSENBERGER NOT TO GO
NEW YORK—J. M. Rosenberger, one of the American athletes who were going on the tour of the world this winter, has notified Secretary J. S. Sullivan of the A. A. U. he cannot make the trip. An effort is being made to get another athlete to take his place. J. Power of the B. A. A. and M. Alderman of Stanford University are the two athletes ready to go.

FRESHMEN HOLD VARSITY
AMHERST—Surprise was felt Tuesday when the Amherst freshmen held the varsity football squad scoreless for nearly an hour during practice. It was only by unusually hard scrimmaging in the last few minutes of play that the varsity was able to carry the ball over the line for a touchdown by Knowlton.

The varsity was weakened by the absence of Chamberlain, Swasey and C. Shumway.

PRINCETON HAS STRENUOUS WORK ON OSBORN FIELD

No Letup in Work for Football Candidates Despite Nearness of Game With Dartmouth

PRINCETON, N. J.—In spite of the fact that the game with Dartmouth is only three days away the football coaches plan to put the Orange and Black varsity candidates through another strenuous secret practice this afternoon on Osborn field. There is still much work to be done in order to get the team in shape for its contest with the Hanover eleven, and the intention is to keep the players at hard scrimmage work right up to the last.

Football work of the real strenuous kind was indulged in by the Princeton eleven Tuesday afternoon. It included an hour and a half of scrimmage, three quarters of an hour against what is called team B henceforth, and will be used as the regular opposing combination for the varsity, and three quarters against the second eleven. Against team B the varsity was on the defensive all the time, and in addition the coaches put Andrews, one of the field coaches, in at quarterback for team B. The combination proved too strong for the varsity, Andrews succeeding in getting away for one touchdown and Kirby adding a field goal from the 25-yard line shortly afterward.

Then the varsity took the ball in the middle of the field and reversed the order by carrying the ball for an unlimited number of downs. By dint of line smashing the ball was carried down near the goal line and Captain Baker took it across for the first touchdown. Streit succeeded in scoring a touchdown later after a series of the same sort of line smashes, Streit doing the bulk of the work.

To all of this the coaches added a quarter of an hour defensive work against the Dartmouth formations which they are aiming to guard against by this preliminary training. Phillips and Bailing returned to the game after a short rest and both proceeded to smash up things with their regained energy. Phillips was in the midst of things continually and spilled several of the formations before they were half started.

The coaches gave Smeat at right and S. Baker at quarterback, and Glick at right halfback, a rest from scrimmage, but they took part in the preliminary work. For the seconds, Heyniger, who was replaced last week at left guard by W. Swart, starred this afternoon, and with him Gile at right guard and Dolton at right half proved stumbling blocks for the varsity attack. Semmens was given a short tryout at right guard on the varsity for the first time in 10 days and showed well. Swart replaced him after a short while.

COLUMBIA AGAIN HAS FALL ROWING FOR VARSITY MEN

Coach J. C. Rice Decided to Call Men Out After Practice Had Been Abandoned Since Fall of 1910—No Big Races

HAS THREE VETERANS

NEW YORK—For the first time since 1910 candidates for the Columbia varsity crew have been called out for fall practice, and it is the intention of Coach J. C. Rice to have the men out on the Hudson as long as possible this fall. During the past three years the varsity men have been given the fall to themselves that they might get a good start in their studies, but this plan has not worked out to the entire satisfaction of Coach Rice, and so the fall practice will be resumed again.

Turning out a varsity crew at Columbia next spring does not promise to be easy. Only three of the veterans of the eight that rowed at Poughkeepsie in June are in college, and it will be difficult getting together enough material to fill out the first crew, with no chance to organize a junior varsity eight, which is to take the place of the four-oared race in the regatta next year.

Captain Hadsell, No. 3; Rothwell, No. 4, and Williams, bow, are the only men left from the big crew; but there is a possibility that Claghorn, who rowed No. 5, will return in February. Bratton, who rowed in the winning 1914 freshman crew, has also returned after two years' absence, and he will try for a place in the first shell. Another promising varsity man who has returned is Robinson, who rowed in the "four" two years ago, but was unable to row last year.

With the exception of these men, Coach Rice will have a hard time recruiting men for the boat. Herkert, Cronenberg, Sanborn and McCarthy of last year's four are all back, but Sanborn is the only one who seems destined for a varsity seat. McCarthy was tried out last year, but couldn't hold the place. Although the work that Coach Rice expects the men to do this fall will not be compulsory, he hopes the larger part of the squad that he had at Poughkeepsie last season will report.

According to his present plans, there will be no big races for the oarsmen this fall, although they will probably row in an interclass regatta late next month. Next spring, however, Coach Rice wants to have his crew row in more preliminary races than they competed in last year, and with this end in view efforts will be made to arrange for races with Yale, Harvard and Princeton.

THE HOME FORUM

American Sculptor and His National Groups

Very interesting things are told in an article in Scribner's Magazine of the successes of the American sculptor, Paul Bartlett. He has been honored signally by several of the most famous art institutions and schools in Europe, and is at present at work on several commissions for his own country. He is making the marble groups for the pediment of the House of Representatives wing of the Capitol at Washington. These plans, even after having been accepted, were made over and over to suit both the artist's concept and the architectural ideal of how the marble should harmonize with the whole. The central figure is Democracy. The idea at first was to have her represent Peace, but now she is holding her hand in protection over the young figure of Genius, who kneels, but holds his torch always upright. One of the accessory figures shows the husbandman, one the laborer of the shops, one navigation and a little child is leading a ram, hinting pastoral occupations. All the groups were made to diminish naturally in size or posture to the sharp angle of the pediment, instead of being forced into the smaller space by conventional devices. These figures are to be done in Georgia marble, as mellow in tone than the pure white Italian. The extreme length of the pediment is 80 feet. The figures will fill at least 60 feet. The cornice on which they stand is about 60 feet from the ground.

Mr. Bartlett is executing six figures also for the front of the new public library in New York—Philosophy, History, Drama and Poetry, Romance and Religion.

His statue of Benjamin Franklin for Waterbury, Conn., departs from the usual placid conception of portraits of great thinkers. It shows the distinguished patriot as if he had just dropped into a seat for an instant while his thought was actively intent, lifting him away from his duller fellows into unseen places. It is quite typical of Mr. Bartlett's work that his idea of Franklin is very far from the profound impression of brooding repose made by Rodin's thinker, exhibited not long ago in New York.

Minnesota's Iron Wealth

Citing the fact that the last issue of the United States geological survey bulletin shows that in 1912 Minnesota produced 62.43 per cent of the total iron ore output of the United States, or about one third of the world's production, the Bellman says: Minnesota's iron ore output for that year amounted to nearly 34,500,000 long tons; the state with the next greatest production, Michigan, supplied about 11,000,000 tons. The greatest consumer of Minnesota's iron ore, the steel plant at Gary, Ind., is 650 miles from these iron mines. With the increasing demands for finished steel products in the West and to save freight on the useless elements in the ore going from the mines to the furnaces and the return charges on the finished product, Minnesota will soon become an iron and steel manufacturer as well as an ore producer. Already a $20,000,000 steel plant is nearing completion at Duluth.

MAN FREED FROM BELIEF OF LIMITATION

WRITTEN FOR THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

ONE of the offices of the Christ, according to the prophecy of Isaiah, was "to proclaim liberty to the captives, and the opening of the prison to them that are bound." That the Master construed these words in their broadest sense is seen by his constant effort to rouse all whom he taught from their material limitations in every direction. Not once during his marvelous ministry, in which he overcame all manner of sin and disease, triumphed over so-called material elements, physical laws and limitations, did he intimate that he was doing anything which could not be accomplished by any individual who understood and applied the Science of spiritual power. The "mind" which was also in Christ Jesus was devoid of limitations because the real, spiritual consciousness is a reflection of the limitless, divine Mind, God.

Jesus never sought to make a display of the spiritual power of which he was conscious. But in the natural order of his wonderful life, every demand that came to him found him triumphantly reflecting ideal manhood. In all of his numerous and varied experiences, ranging from an obedient childhood, onward through the duties of citizen, teacher and leader of the world's mightiest reform, he was free to express his highest spiritual nature. In the world he was unfettered by the world. This Christ-model each one of us must accept as the pattern and test for our own lives. It is possible for us to begin at once fashioning our lives after this pure example. However dark may seem our own particular prison house, however cruelly we appear to be enthralled by our personal limitations, they melt into nothingness before the Mind which was in Christ Jesus.

Why have mortals been doomed, as it has seemed, to fret in the chains of endless limitations? The trouble began in the ancient twilight of human history when mortal belief assumed the existence of an evil material power. Men "limited the Holy One of Israel." To believe in an evil power is to limit our sense of the infinite goodness of God. In reality nothing can limit God or subtract an iota from His omnipotence and omnipresence. Men's lives are governed by their ideals. Therefore the inevitable reaction of the belief that God, good, is limited, is the belief that man is limited. Mrs. Eddy, the Discoverer and Founder of Christian Science, says: "Mortal man has made a covenant with his eyes to belittle Deity with human conceptions. In league with material sense, mortals take limited views of all things" (Science and Health, p. 255). We have circumscribed ourselves by thinking within the narrow limits of false beliefs concerning God and man. Sickness and failure are the products of limited thinking. We limit our life work because we believe that we lack capabilities for good. We accept the material sense testimony concerning man instead of arousing ourselves to declare

Love's Destiny

One of the significant notes of this time in poetry is heard when what has long been written of despairingly as the human "fate" or "destiny" is seen to be rather the ultimate realization of harmony and love. Edwin Markham touches on this happier concept that the inexorable "fate" of man is joy and good, in his poem entitled "Love's Vigil." He says, "Love will outwatch the stars." God's warrior will "conquer with a look." The slowly dawning assurance that nothing can be lost that really belongs to the harmony of the universe is shadowed forth in the following lines:

All will be well if he have strength to wait.
Till his lost Pleiad, white and silver shod,
Regains her place to make the perfect seven;
Then all the worlds will know that Love is fate.
That somehow He is greater even than heaven—
That in the Cosmic Council He is God.

Dr. Henry Van Dyke and His "Days Off"

Dr. Henry Van Dyke has taken some "days off" from his home doings that have given themes to write upon such as when he went on the "holiday in a vacation" in the book he calls "Days Off." He and his son were pegging quite successfully through their vacation at Bar Harbor, Me. They were doing all the things expected of them and keeping up an appearance of civilization in proper harmony with the nice summer cottages and the well dressed people around them. But one day the son told his father, under pledge of secrecy, that he really had to have a day off from his vacation! So they bade farewell to the family circle and made for the woods. The Maine woods that lie down in the southeast corner are surrounded by railroads but not as yet cut up by them to any serious extent. So the two truant had wilderness days and star still nights to their hearts' content. They had sent ahead for guides and at the end of a 25-mile drive they found the two men waiting in tow away the "duffle" and make tracks—as the silentest paddle must—in the rippling current northward.

Dr. Van Dyke says, by the way, that "duffle" is the word in New York state for the kit or pack of an outing party. It comes of course from the good word duffle, meaning a kind of heavy cloth used for cloaks and outside wraps. In French Canada these traps are called "butins," a good French word meaning booty. But down in Maine they call them "wangan," and nobody can guess why.

Profitable Poem

The Bookman makes the statement that though prices for the work of famous writers in these days have ranged from 20 cents to $1 a word, probably the poem "An Old Sweetheart of Mine" by James Whitcomb Riley has earned the most money for its author. It is estimated that this bit of verse has yielded Mr. Riley over $500 a word.

Faith of Early Christians

The ancient Christians were animated by . . . a just confidence of immortality, of which the doubtful and imperfect faith of modern ages cannot give us any adequate notion. . . . The edification of New Jerusalem was to advance by equal steps with the destruction of the mystic Babylon.—Gibbon.

VALLEY IN THE TYROLEAN ALPS, AUSTRIA

(reproduced by permission)

AMONGST the most beautiful mountain scenery in the world is that of the Tyrolean Alps, sometimes known as the Dolomites. The wild glens, at the foot of which mountain torrents rush along; the narrow valleys, with their carpets of grass strewn with huge boulders; the lower slopes of the mountains, always steep, more often than not precipitous, and nearly always covered with a forest of larches, pines and firs, and the bare limestone mountain peaks towering several thousand feet above them, combine to form a series of pictures of superb grandeur and magnificence. Everywhere rough and rugged, the mountains every now and then assume some fantastic shape or jut up into sharp pinnacles or jagged edges, which greatly add to their picturesqueness. One of the typical valleys of this region, looking toward Monte Marmolata, is shown in the picture.

IN DAYS OF THE FIRST AMERICAN BANKS

BOSTON is proud of her historical dignities, but for all her patriotism and literary fame and musical repute it is also interesting that the first bank in America was established in Boston in 1686. It only endured for three years, to be sure and it did not issue money, for only the colony's government could do that. But it lent money on "real and personal estate and imperishable merchandise." The second American bank was also opened in Boston. This was in 1714, 10 years after the first newspaper was started in the town. It issued $400,000 of scrip called merchants' notes, which sustained a good credit, although it was only scrip, and existed on a basis of airy nothingness, forbidden today. This bank, too, was short lived. In 1740 the Land Bank was organized by several hundred subscribers, who gathered in Boston, just as the bankers have recently met, and tried to supply a deficiency in specie by issuing it on real estate holdings. The Specie Bank was also attempted at this time, but the bills of credit issued by the colonies were too strong competitors in the confidence of the people. It was as hard for these banks to survive, as the National magazine said recently, as it would be today for any bank to mint money in competition with the United States.

The Bank of North America in Philadelphia appears to have been the first permanent institution. It received a charter from Congress during the revolution and its branch in Massachusetts was such a success that the Bank of Massachusetts was chartered in 1784, the second permanent bank in the country. This is still in operation as the First National Bank of Boston.

There were 30 banks in the city in 1851 with an aggregate capital of $21,700,000. Two more were formed that same year. In 1878 there were 61 national banks, a larger number than in any other city of the country. They had then a total cash capital of $53,150,000, about equal to the total capital of the New York banks of the time. A book dated 1878 speaks of the Maverick National Bank as the leader, "combining in an eminent degree, stability and enterprise." It was established about 1850, and failed about half a century later. The Boston Clearing House Association was organized in 1856, the second organization of the kind in the country. A clearing house is the place where all the banks send their messengers with checks and drafts and money and everybody exchanges checks and money. This is better than sending messengers to each bank from each bank to pay and collect what is due. In 1878, we read, 51 banks sent their messengers and settling clerks to the New England National Bank building to clean house as it were, or clear up all these daily demands. About $7,000,000 changed hands every day. The city also had 16 savings banks. The savings banks of America had their origin in Boston and the first was the Provident Institution for Savings, chartered in 1816. In 1878 it had a larger amount of deposits than any except the Bowery Savings Bank of New York. Boston has about 30 savings banks now. In March, 1913, there were only 19 national banks in Boston, but they had total resources of $339,849,581. The total number of banks is 61, with total resources of almost $1,000,000,000. Many banks have consolidated and the flow of business has so little relation to the capitalization today that it is hard to give a summary of figures that really represent the business of the city. The amount that changes hands daily at the clearing house nowadays ranges from $25,000,000 to $35,000,000, which gives some idea of the advance since 1878.

Sea Lily and Star Fish

The sea lily is a cousin of the starfish and the basket fish. It grows up with long slender arms that collect in a funnel-shaped mass that has much the shape of a lily. But unlike the starfish the sea lily grows from a long stalk that sends out root-like branches among the rocks under the water. The arms of this queer fish can move about but otherwise it is as quiet as a real land lily. The starfish can swim and so can the basket fish, which floats about with a lot of long curly arms that look very much like a tangle of moss.

A starfish can grow a new arm if one is broken. It grows a beautiful star-like shell that hardens when cast on the shore. In the water it moves about with these starry arms.

Owl and the Fountain

The people who visit the White House grounds in Washington have often heard owls among the trees, but not until lately was one of the strange birds really seen. He was swooping down into the fountain to catch gold fish and became entangled by the long stems of the water lilies. He was found there next morning, supported by the outstretched wings, which measured four feet across. He was the kind known as the horned owl, with feathery egrets on the head. Whoever before thought of fishing for owls in a fountain?

Blackfeet Indians

An interesting picture in the Review of Reviews shows the United States cabinet officer, the secretary of the interior, as he is called, talking with some Indian chiefs in the great hall of the Glacier Park hotel in Montana. The Indians are Blackfeet from the Blackfeet reservation and they are in full Indian costume. One man has an immense crown of long feathers surrounding his head and face. Another has a queer-looking fur cap and beaded trousers and moccasins and a long scarf of wampum or bead work round his neck. Another wears his hair much as white men do, in a pompadour over his forehead, but he is dressed in a full suit of light-colored doeskins all ornamented with beads. Secretary Lane wears high riding boots and knickerbockers and a soft hat. They are all looking at a big map. The secretary is arranging with the Indians for opening to the public some trails across the Indian reservation which is next the Glacier national park. The reservation has always been held for the use of the Indians, with not even a public road or trail across it.

Why Washington Needs to Be Watched

ONE of the underlying motives in the creation of a federal district for the capital of the United States was that the business of the nation might be transacted uninfluenced by either concentrated population or wealth. For many years there was little reason to believe that Washington would become either a populous or a commercial city. During one notable period, neglect of public improvements, other than those having to do with the erection of suitable buildings for governmental purposes, was such that the idea of moving the national capital was seriously discussed. The streets and avenues were in a disgraceful condition and mud and "magnificent distances" were among the city's principal characteristics. Then, in response to protest from all quarters of the country, were begun improvements that have made Washington one of the handsomest capitals in the world. In recent years, as everybody knows, all public work there has been made to conform to a plan laid down by a commission of which D. W. Burnham, an eminent architect and city planner, was the chief.

Millions have been spent upon the beautification of Washington in recent years. As a consequence it is rapidly becoming a favorite place of residence for the rich and cultured and as a consequence, also, it has developed a local trade of very considerable magnitude.

We are told now in the Monitor's despatches that the city's social needs are, in the estimation of the Wilson administration, overshadowing the physical. This tells more eloquently than could mere figures how far Washington is advancing or retrograding on lines of modern metropolitanism. It has apparently reached the point, that is, where because of its bigness, it is being confronted with such problems as must be faced by New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston, St. Louis, Pittsburgh, Cleveland, Cincinnati and other large cities. So clearly is this the case that one of the commissioners of the district is quoted as saying: "The policy followed (in making up the district budget) with the approval of President Wilson has been to retard the expenditures of large sums for external beautification, and to increase activity in advancing such services as we hope will make for a more rapid development of the social and moral conditions of the people of the whole city." This is wise and commendable, but, as we have already intimated, it serves to show how far Washington is getting away from the idea of its founders. And departure from the original plan and the original ideal is again emphasized in the earnestness with which the construction of suburban and interurban trolley lines is urged in other quarters, with the view of increasing the city's business. There is even promise or danger that the community may before long become largely industrial as well as commercial.

The three roads being traveled by Washington should combine to make the city beautiful, wholesome and busy, but in the end may they not also combine to render it independent of government patronage and protection, or may they not lead to conditions which, on prudential grounds, will bring about its abandonment as a capital? In other words, can Washington become as great as some of its friends and residents would have it without passing to a large degree under influences which the founders deemed it wise to avoid? The point of importance at present is, that tendencies in Washington are such as to call for very careful watching.

News from Paris to the effect that those who make the styles are at a loss to say what will come next, would tend to leave the inference that the futurists are backing out.

Dependent Races in the United States

THE annual autumn conference at Mohonk Lake, N. Y., opens today with the customary objects in view, and in general the customary group of participants. The goal is creation of sound opinion on political and ethical issues involved in the government's relations with Indians, Porto Ricans and Filipinos. The method always is by frank discussion, in which representatives of these races, government officials, philanthropists and arm-chair philosophers all share. It is notable that the management apparently thought it unwise to adopt the plan urged last year, that consideration be given to problems of race arising from extension of the moral if not political authority of the United States in lands adjoining the Caribbean.

Judging by the program, attention is to be concentrated especially on the home Indian problem. Oklahoma, as the commonwealth having within it most of the Indian wards of the nation, is to be given especial attention. Its own citizens and investigators from without will share in the illuminating process. The larger problem involved in reformation or abolition of the present board of Indian commissioners also will be discussed.

Of course recent modification of the national policy toward the Filipinos, as authorized by an executive order from President Wilson, must influence somewhat the course of debate of the future of the Philippines. Last year gave the first opportunity for critics of American occupation and stewardship to state their case fairly. Their point of view is scheduled for presentation this year.

The American public as yet has hardly done full justice to the Mohonk conferences as forums in which large national issues get something like dispassionate consideration by experts whose talk is carried on in an atmosphere of serenity and good will. The idealist and doctrinaire have to undergo the criticism of the practical administrator. The latter has to subject himself to the inspirational prods of men sensitive to national honor who are loath to see a democracy fall short of justice in its treatment of dependents.

It is not true that all political campaign contributions are made from selfish or dishonest motives, but it seems to be true, judging from recent investigations, that too many of them are. For this reason the interest of the public would be subserved by their prohibition.

If Mexico does not want outside interference she should not be so insistent in offering inducements along that line.

APPLE DAY has come and is gone. The International Apple Shippers Association thought it would be a helpful thing to the apple trade if on one certain day of every year everybody would eat at least three apples. Even if the population of the United States should be divided by four, leaving approximately 25,000,000 apple eaters, consumption on the three-apple basis for one day would reach 75,000,000, which would make quite a hole in the supply. But the country could stand much greater consumption of apples than this. Out in Portland and Spokane alone, apples are being handled by the thousand carload. The north Pacific fruit distributors report shipments of 6000 carload lots. Oregon is a great apple state, but it is far from being the only one or the leading one. Missouri, New York, Ohio, Michigan, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Virginia, Massachusetts, Indiana and several other states, East, West and South, had a larger crop than Oregon last year. But Oregon is building up a great demand for its apples and it is making gains at a ratio that promises to give it a leading place in the near future.

On the whole, however, the apple crop of the country is not keeping pace with the times. The total product in 1900 amounted to 175,397,000 bushels; last year it fell to 147,522,000 bushels. The value of the crop last year was put at $83,231,000; this year it is estimated to be about $100,000,000, the increase being due mainly to higher prices. Perhaps Oregon's apple crop attracts greater attention and perhaps, generally speaking, it is harvested with greater profit to the producer because it is handled largely through cooperation. It seems to be the case, also, that the Oregon apple crop is gathered in a smaller area, and therefore more economically than in the older states. It is the gathering of the apples in quantities to pay for shipping under present transportation conditions that works to the disadvantage of the small grower in many parts of the country. The trees and orchards are scattered. In many instances the apples are not gathered at all, or they are fed to cattle.

It would be impossible to estimate at present how great is the annual loss to the United States from failure of the small orchardist to get his fruit marketed, but it must reach a stupendous figure in the aggregate. Here is a real and a pressing problem. Not only the home market but many foreign markets are ready to take American apples in much greater quantities than they do now, providing the apples can be delivered at more reasonable prices. They can be delivered at more reasonable prices only through a better and cheaper system of transportation and distribution. The parcel post was expected to lead to a solution of the problem. It has not done so yet, but there is reason for thinking that it will do so in time, that improvement in the system will not cease until the small grower of apples, and the small producer of foodstuffs of all kinds, shall be enabled to find markets for the commodities he has to offer.

Women in Texas Highway Work

NOVEMBER 5 is to be Good Roads day in Texas, and certain features of the program reflect very eloquently some modern social conditions in the great southwestern state. Take it particularly in Bexar county, of which San Antonio is the chief city. There the leading club women have announced their intention of cooperating with the men in the improvement of the highways. Some forty of the leading club women of San Antonio are to take the matter of providing eatables and drinkables for the workers. Club women and women of social prominence all along the line of the San Antonio-Austin road in Bexar county have also indicated their intention to lend a helping hand to the cause. The club women and social leaders will have fathers, husbands, brothers and friends in the working force, and when these are signaled by the different superintendents to lay down their picks and shovels for the noon hour, "a procession of automobiles," loaded with provisions and refreshments, will be on hand to provide luncheon.

That this process of road construction and this method of treatment for the road laborers will be very different from the system that was in vogue throughout the Southwest a few short years ago may be true without affecting the value of the work accomplished, except to increase it. The laborers will not be outcasts of society, nor will they represent an inferior grade of workers, but they may, nevertheless, be excellent road builders. It has been demonstrated in many vocations and many undertakings in these recent years that intelligence counts for more than ignorant drudgery, no matter how the latter may be backed by main strength, in any line of constructive effort. It is safe to assume that the fathers, husbands, brothers and friends of the advanced thinkers among the women of Bexar county, Texas, will make a showing in their day's work none the less creditable because a procession of automobiles has been attached to the amateur road-making commissary service. The same impulse that moved them to strive for commercial, industrial and professional and social success, can be expected to spur them to excellent achievement in highway construction, and this impulse will be strengthened by the sympathy and practical assistance of women.

INTEREST in the Panama canal as a feat of waterway construction, or as a factor in all future history determining currents of trade, and hence rise and fall of nations, should not prevent conjecture and solicitude for the future of the men who have built it. We already have discussed some of the phases of this problem and intimated some of the ways in which an exceptional group of experts could be continued in the national service developing coastal waterways, managing large schemes for use of lands now untitled, and supervising Alaskan territorial development under complete federal control. But none of these recommendations may take practical form. And if they should, there would still be left a considerable number of the 5000 Americans who have spent from one to seven years in the Canal Zone who would find it necessary to reestablish customary relations of residence and occupation within the United States. It is of this group, large or small as events will indicate, that some consideration may not be inopportune.

These workers return to smaller wages, higher rents, rising cost of food, raiment, and the necessities of life, and the necessity of settling, by combat with ancient and deep-seated forces of business, issues that in Panama were settled for them by the irresistible power of a beneficent government. Army discipline, fitted to and imposed on civilian needs, wrought economic advantage as well as other kinds of good.

Apple Day and the Small Grower

The reaction upon persons who have thus profited by paternalism at its best as they make the plunge back into the disturbed social pool, where to swim to shore means to struggle with rivals as well as to combat nature, will be interesting to watch. Nor will it be surprising if, as the result of this assimilation process, the home public finds the number of persons increased who would see government, national and state, take on new functions of administration.

What the effect of return to their homes will be upon the many thousand workers from the West Indies and from other sources of supply whence the subordinate builders of the canal have been drawn also will be worth noting as time goes on. Many of these have had radically new standards of pay, dietary, pleasures, and thrift taught them which they cannot possibly forget, at least immediately. Their savings in many instances have preceded them and already have been invested in ways that insure the returning workers a higher social status in their home districts. To the laborers as well as to the officials the Panama canal work has been a liberal education.

This generation cannot expect to witness the results of the reforestation projects of the United States government; rather will it feel more acutely as the years go by the results of governmental neglect of the forests in the past. A dozen years ago one who had given close attention to the work of denudation wrote: "Apparently the forest policy of the government has been to get rid of the land, and that of the people to get rid of the timber." It is a fact, at once as remarkable as pathetic, that a century of forest spoliation had gone on before the government raised a hand to stop it. The first forest reservations from the public domain, for forest purposes in part, were made in 1891. Only in the last ten years, however, has the work of restoration taken definite shape; only within the last six years has it taken on vigorous form.

But it is now making headway. There is much tree planting in all the forest reserves. The Monitor has told its readers within a few days of the extensive tree seeding and planting going on in Washington and Oregon, especially upon the denuded mountain slopes. In like manner seeding and planting are proceeding elsewhere, the tracts under cultivation running into the thousands of acres. Fir, pine and spruce are the growths most favored at present, although the period is largely one of experimentation. The principal aim of the government is to provide the nation of the future with resources in commercial timber.

The process will be slow. It will require a century to repair the losses consequent on the ruthless destruction of the soft timber forests alone. With strict adherence to law in the public domain much that was doomed can be saved. The satisfying thing is the knowledge, gained from the experience of other nations, that while the damage suffered by the American forests has been tremendous, it is not irreparable. Time, patience, industry, persistence in the policy now being pursued will work wonders for the forests, and coming generations, with greater appreciation of their inheritance than was manifested by the past, in this particular at least, may be reasonably expected to be more careful in its conservation.

It is not impossible to see how the United States just at present might make use of a few squads from an international police force created as a substitute for militarism in every form. The germ of a tremendous idea lies in the thought that police might be called out as well to pacify an unruly nation as to quiet an unruly individual.

TRAVELERS in South America are as one in pronouncing the opera houses in the leading cities, there splendid structures. When to this is added that the respective governments or municipalities in the first instance pay the bills for the maintenance of high-class opera, and that the public enters with enthusiasm into any scheme that makes for musical advancement, it is more readily understood why the southern republics consider it a proper thing to subsidize operatic art and to provide buildings that are the pride of their localities.

It may be news to a considerable number of readers that many great operatic singers were welcomed in South America before they visited the United States. Sorel, Constantino, Bonci and Tetraxini have sung more frequently in Rio de Janeiro and Buenos Aires than in New York. Performers of world-wide renown acclaim the opera houses of the Brazilian and Argentine capitals wonderful from the architectural standpoint, and the acoustics they rate as equal to the best. Seldom is the municipal opera house crowded away among other structures, but it usually stands in the leading plaza, open on all sides, and centering the social life of the city. In this way the building impresses itself on the citizens and strangers, carrying outwardly the artistic message that is exemplified within by talent that comes from many lands. Italian, French and Spanish are the languages used by singers that consider it a chief part of their career to appear in South America.

This nationalizing of music among South Americans has proved an educational asset which in some respects makes amends for other shortcomings in the line of learning. Some of the southern governments now realize that the public demands free schools, as much, if not more, than subsidized opera. But it would be a difficult task to dissociate the South American from his national music and, in cities where the public school question is now agitating the people, primary educational progress is scarcely to be won at the sacrifice of the musical ideals. As, in the United States, music has become a necessary supplement to public school education, so, in South America, there should be no difficulty in maintaining a national music standard while improving the school system along democratic lines.

THE actual cash in the world is estimated at $12,000,000,000, or about $11 per capita. Statisticians have a great liking for the term "per capita." It serves to round out some big figures pleasantly.

MEMBERS of the Chinese Parliament wore frock coats and high hats at the inauguration of President Yuan, and yet it is claimed by many that the republic means freedom.
